Sixty-three thousand Federal and District Government workers retreated from their offices yesterday before the onslaughts of dat old debbil weather.

The temperature climbed to a high point of 95.4 degrees at 5:14 p. m. after hovering above the 90 mark from noon onward.

Five persons were prostrated by the heat and taken to hospitals.

And the outlook? More of the unearthly same, according to Government weather forecasters. It's hot, they said, clear westward to Kansas, and the maritime tropical air mass now blistering a score of States shows little or no sign of moving out.

No Rain Promised

The remotely possible relief mentioned by the forecasters Tuesday, showers yesterday afternoon or evening, failed to develop. For today, they're not even mentioning such a possibility.

The exodus of Government workers from non-airconditioned and now-superheated buildings, began at 12:45 p. m. yesterday and continued until 3:45 p. m., as structures grew hotter and hotter.

Agriculture evacuated 10,400; Veterans Administration 6000 in its main building and 2600 at Suitland; Army at tempo buildings in Virginia, 4000; Army Quartermaster General at Fort McNair, 3700; District government, 3000, and Commerce at Suitland, 2500. Many other smaller groups were dismissed.

Those stricken by the heat were:

Charles Hulse, 59, 612 A st. ne., from a warehouse at 1901 Fenwick st. ne., to Casualty Hospital, condition fair.

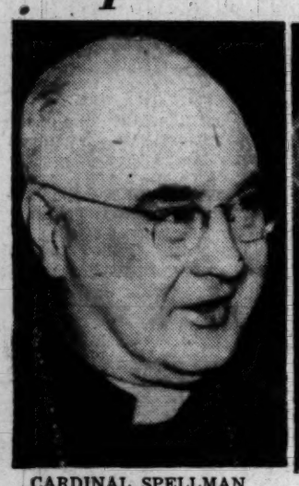
Bill Robinson, 49, 1802 Wyoming ave. nw., collapsed at 11th and F sts. nw., cutting his head, Emergency Hospital, condition fair.

Garford Smith, 46, 5010 Lee st. ne., treated at Emergency Hospital and released.

William Johnson, 71, 1514 B st. se., collapsed at Maple ave., and East-West Hwy., Bethesda, where he was working. Taken to Suburban Hospital by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad, treated and released.

Frank Johnson, 74, 641 B st. se., admitted to Gallinger Hospital, condition good.

God Is Judge of Worth, Mrs. Roosevelt Replies To Spellman's Charge



CARDINAL SPELLMAN

MRS. ROOSEVELT

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 27 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, accused by Francis Cardinal Spellman of anti-Catholic bias "unworthy of an American mother," told the prelate today that God is the final judge of a human being's worth.

She said she holds no bias against the Catholic Church and that she will continue to speak out for the things she believes are right.

Mrs. Roosevelt sent the Cardinal a point-by-point reply to last Friday's letter in which he assailed her opposition to the use of Fed-

Officials Hit Senate's Idea Of Self-Rule

11 More Witnesses Urge Approval As Hearings Are Ended by House

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A new round of appeals for prompt action to give the District a measure of self government marked the windup of House hearings on Washington home rule legislation yesterday.

Eleven witnesses, headed by Representative Charles B. Deane (D., N. C.) urged the House District Judiciary Subcommittee to move speedily toward giving the House a chance to pass on the home rule legislation this session.

There were no opposition witnesses, but the session still produced a new burst of ammunition against the Senate-approved home rule bill in the form of a letter from the Board of District Commissioners. It was placed in the record by Subcommittee Chairman Oren Harris (D., Ark.)

May Submit Statements

With the hearings now closed, Harris said other persons would have until Tuesday to submit written statements for the record. He said he plans to call a meeting of the subcommittee sometime next week for its first discussion of what to do next about the home rule legislation. He would not commit himself about what should be done.

The Commissioners' letter, signed by John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, indorsed the principle of home rule. Then for some six pages it challenged details of the Senate measure in terms equaled in sharpness only by the previous testimony of the Washington Board of Trade, and in statements by some of the subcommittee members. Their letter was directed formally at the home rule bill of Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.), a word-for-word duplicate of the Senate-approved bill.

Commissioners Criticize

The Commissioners sharply criticized the election provisions, the system for legislating and the provisions for public borrowing and many other features of the home rule bill.

"We do not believe that home rule would add anything to the cleanness, honest, and freedom from graft and corruption of our city government," Commissioner Young wrote District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.).

"The example of other American cities certainly justifies this belief. Nevertheless, local self-government is the traditional heritage of every American.

"For this reason, as a matter of principle, we feel that our citizens should be given home rule.

No Bypass On Bombs, Truman Says

Congress Assured Of Consultation Before Any Move To Share Secrets

Post Reporter
By Mary Spargo

President Truman assured Congress yesterday the legislative branch will be consulted before any step is taken to share United States bomb secrets with Great Britain and Canada.

The Chief Executive's pledge was relayed to the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy by Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Acheson, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and members of the Atomic Energy Commission were in conference with the committee for an hour and a half.

After the meeting, Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) issued a formal statement. The statement said in part:

"The President feels, according to Mr. Acheson, that any action on questions such as these — which vitally affect national security — must have the support of both the Executive and Legislative branches of government.

"The Secretary of State, acting on instructions from the President, outlined a plan for maintaining the status quo, and also for conducting exploratory discussions with the British and Canadians."

1.09 Billion Voted AEC for Year

The Senate yesterday approved $1,090,000,000 in cash and contract authority for the Atomic Energy Commission to carry on its work during the current fiscal year.

The amount, previously approved by the House, is $76,879,603 less than the AEC asked for in its budget.

There was no floor debate, or dissent, on the Senate action.

Earlier, Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Independent Offices Subcommittee, and Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Joint Senate-House Atomic Committee had indicated they would oppose the cut.

Cave Man Lover Too Much for Wife

Los Angeles, July 27 (AP).—Two weeks of marriage to a cave man lover left her a physical wreck, Mrs. Mary Galindo, 47, complained in Superior Court today.

In winning an annulment from Bernard M. Galindo, 47-year-old welder, she testified that when he made love to her he bit her lips so hard she had to call police. At other times he hugged her so amorously he crushed her ribs, she said.

Mrs. Galindo said they were married last May 25 and that she separated from him two weeks later.

Barkley Says He's Certain Foreign Aid Will Pass

McClellan Raises A Point of Order On Legislation In Money Measure

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The buffeted $5,573,724,000 foreign aid bill, already four weeks behind schedule, yesterday was recommitted on a parliamentary technicality after a weird Senate tangle on rules.

Vice President Barkley himself ordered the bill sent back to the Appropriations Committee. He said he was forced to do so under the rules when Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) raised a point of order that the measure carried legislation not permissable on a money bill.

A hotly contested amendment by McClellan, requiring ECA and the Army to buy two billion dollars worth of surplus American farm products, had just been stricken from the bill on a similar point of order by the Democratic leadership.

Committee to Be Called

When and in what form the foreign aid measure comes back to the Senate is up to the unpredictable Appropriations Committee, which slashed ECA funds more than 10 per cent on the first go-round and tacked on a string of restrictions.

Chairman McKellar (D., Tenn.) said he will call the committee together "in a day or two."

Said McKellar: "I don't see any reason why it shouldn't be reconsidered all down the line. That's what it was sent back to committee for."

Some key members of his committee said they favored prompt action. To avoid any further delays, they suggested that controversial "legislative" amendments be divorced from the bill and submitted separately on the Senate floor.

Money Bills Pile Up

The unexpected foreign aid setback precipitated a new money bill log-jam almost equal to the pile-up at the July 1 start of this fiscal year.

Besides foreign aid, these five big money bills, representing more than two-thirds of the President's entire budget, still are snarled in the Senate or in conference: Armed services, Independent offices, civil functions, Interior and the third deficiency bill.

To carry these agencies through July, Congress passed a stop-gap continuing resolution in June. But even the stop-gap funds run out Sunday night. House and Senate spokesmen last night said they may have to act quickly to dispatch a second emergency resolution through Congress.

Undone by yesterday's recommittal of the foreign aid bill were three days of Senate work on the measure. The Senate will have to Summer Ban On Custards Urged in D. C.

The District Health Department yesterday asked restaurants, bakeries and other food stores to stop sales of custards and cream-filled foods this summer.

The request was made, it was said, to prevent further outbreaks of food poisoning similar to last week's flare-up at a Government Services, Inc., cafeteria, which sent 10 persons to the hospital.

In their investigation, health officials noted, they found custard-filled cakes infected with the organism staphylococcus, the cause of many boils and skin infections.

Vomiting, Cramps Caused

This organism, they explained, is commonly found in the throat and on the hands. When it gets into food, especially that containing milk, eggs and meat, it multiplies rapidly at room temperature. Food so contaminated causes violent vomiting and cramps.

"The presence of staphylococcus or its poison in a food cannot be detected by tasting," health officials said in their warning.

Custards, cream fillings, salads and cooked meats often are contaminated by persons with unclean hands, those with sores on their bodies or from secretions from the nose or throat.

Inspections Urged

Besides asking the summer halt in the sales of custards and cream-filled foods, health officials recommended that salads and cooked meats, unless served immediately, be refrigerated as soon as possible after preparation.

The health officials urged also daily inspection of food handlers by their managers and their continued efforts to educate employes in the hygiene of food preparation.

Youthful Gang Attacks Man, Takes $850

A cafeteria owner was ambushed near his home in Arlington last night by four youths and a girl, beaten with brass knuckles and a nightstick and robbed of $850.

The victim, J. L. Heatwole, about 50, staggered to his home at 4140 Lorcom la. after the robbery and called police.

About 10 minutes later, park police stopped a car on Shirley highway near the Pentagon and arrested four youths and a girl.

They searched the car, they said, and found $850 in a tin box under a seat, as well as a nightstick and brass knuckles.

The youths are 16, 17, 20 and 25. The girl is 20. Heatwole was called to park police headquarters and identified them as his assailants. He said he recognized one of the youths as a former employe.

Park police said the five, all of whom live near 14th and Fairmont sts. nw., will be turned over to Arlington police.

Heatwole, who owns and manages Britt's Cafeteria, 1211 Wisconsin ave. nw., said he was returning home with the day's receipts from the cafeteria.

He said he was attacked shortly before 10 p. m., after he had stepped from a bus and was walking to his home. The five, he said, sprang on him from the bushes.

Heatwole said he was beaten about the face and head. The five left him on the ground stunned, he said, and drove off in a car.

Park police said the car had been rented by one of the youths.

Leonardtown Jail Break Feared; Prisoners Moved

Leonardtown, Md., July 27 (AP).—Four St. Marys County prisoners, who have been under armed guard since police were warned last week that confederates would try to free them, have been removed to a Baltimore jail.

They are John P. Byars and Edward P. Wickline, of Hyattsville, and Charles G. Bradford and his wife, Louise, of Baltimore. They are charged with robbing a general store.

State police put armed guards around the jail after receiving a tip from postal authorities in Washington that an attempt might be made to free the prisoners.

Typhoon Killed 38, Razed or Damaged 42,502 Buildings

Tokyo (Thursday) July 28 (U.P.).—A tyhoon which leveled Okinawa Saturday and hit Shanghai three days later was revealed by an Allied Headquarters report today to have been one of the most destructive winds on record.

An interim report from Gen. Douglas MacArthur listed 38 dead and 252 injured on Okinawa. The fatalities included one American child, one Filipino and 36 natives. The injured included 16 Americans.

A total of 42,502 buildings, public buildings and native dwellings were listed as either destroyed or "50 per cent demolished."

Now police want to know if they need a search warrant to enter Abe's stomach and recover the loot.

U. N. Protests To U. S. on 'Hill' Charge

Lake Success, July 27 (AP).—The United Nations made public today a protest to Secretary of State Acheson against what it called "irresponsible and unfounded" attacks on Secretary-General Trygve Lie and some of the 3000 U. N. staff workers.

Soon afterward the United States State Department issued a statement in Washington challenging the testimony before a Senate subcommittee which caused the protest — the declaration by a mystery witness that Lie's staff is terrorized by Communist agents.

Lincoln White, the State Department press officer, issued the statement. He said: "We are confident that the U. N. would not tolerate a situation like that described by the anonymous witness."

The letter of protest was the sharpest reaction by the U. N. to criticism in any member country. It was written by American-born Byron Price, acting Secretary-

Chiefs of Staff Take Off for Europe Friday

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

The three United States Joint Chiefs of Staff will go to Europe Friday to map plans for the combined defense council to be set up under the North Atlantic Treaty.

Traveling aboard the President's plane, the Independence, the commanders of the Army, Navy, and Air Force will stop at London, Paris, Frankfurt and Vienna.

Announcing the unprecedented peacetime trip, the National Military Establishment said they will be gone about 10 days.

Before leaving, the three commanders—Army Gen. Omar Bradley, Admiral Louis Denfield and Air Force Chief of Staff Hoyt S. Vandenberg—will testify Friday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the proposed $1,450,000,000 foreign arms aid program.

Acheson Appears Today

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who will appear before that committee at 10:30 a. m. today as the first witness on the program, yesterday asked the many critics of the plan to suspend their judgment of it until the evidence is in.

Acheson refused a request made by Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.) that the Administration resubmit the arms bill in a less costly, "interim" form.

Secretary Acheson said the presentation of the arms plan posed a unique problem for, to a great extent, it was being debated—while the North Atlantic treaty was before the Senate — before it was sent to Congress.

This timing, he said, was at the request of Senate leaders, and not his choice. Now he asked Congress to hear the detailed facts, remain-

Churchill Swims As Photographers Are Shooed Away

Gardo, Italy, July 27 (U.P.).—Winston Churchill, in blue trunks and brown straw hat, went swimming today after first making sure police kept away the photographers who disrupted his peace yesterday when he went up a mountainside to paint.

"Keep them off," the former Prime Minister growled. "What do they think I am, a prima donna or a Hollywood star?"

Churchill's secretary meanwhile denied reports circulating here that Churchill broke a diving board yesterday, that he had to be helped out of the water and that he was staying in the same hotel where Benito Mussolini once lived.

Power Safeguards Kept

House-Senate Group Settles Disputes on Military Unity

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A Senate-House conference committee reached virtual agreement yesterday on the final draft of legislation to unify the armed forces further.

Following a day-long meeting, Senator Tydings D., Md.) and Representative Vinson (D., Ga.) announced that all disputed matters between the two houses had been settled. They said the committee will meet this morning to pass on one minor point and then sign the conference report.

Tydings, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told reporters the agreed on version conforms to the Administration unification plan in all important respects.

But details of the agreement show that most "safeguards" against too great concentration of power insisted on by the House Armed Services Committee were retained in the final version.

Chairman Vinson of the House Committee told The Washington Post the following settlement was made on points in dispute between the Senate bill and the once-pigeonholed "House Committee Print No. 2":

1. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff will be a member of the JCS without vote and without command powers, but will be the ranking military officer of the armed services. However, the Joint Chiefs—not their chairman—will be the "principal military adviser" to the President.

2. Three Assistant Secretaries of Defense will be established, as proposed by the House committee. The Senate had provided for none.

3. Provision for a statutory personnel policy board were dropped, as was a provision in the Senate bill permitting voluntary

Hawaii Moves To Create Strike Stevedore Agency

Honolulu, T. H., July 27 (U.P.).—A bill empowering the territorial governor to create a government-owned stevedoring agency to operate during waterfront strikes won tentative approval of a joint special session of the Hawaiian legislature today.

As the legislature moved fast to end the CIO Longshoremen's walkout now in it eighty-eighth day, the lawmakers agreed on the establishment of the special agency as a substitute for the controversial bill empowering the Territory to seize the docks.

House Speaker Hiram Fong said there was "virtually no opposition" to the compromise idea which proposes a publicly-owned stevedoring company to reopen the islands' ports while private companies and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union continue settlement efforts.

Want to Buy Corner Property Next Door to the Blair House?

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

Ever wanted to be a next-door neighbor to the President of the United States? Now's your chance!

You could wave a cheery hello to Harry on his way to work, lend Bess a cup of sugar, or listen to Margaret exercise her vocal cords.

The building at 700 Jackson pl. nw., which backs up to Blair House, the Trumans' temporary abode at 1651 Pennsylvania ave. nw., is up for sale.

It is owned and occupied by the District of Columbia headquarters, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, as are adjoining buildings at 704 and 708 Jackson pl. The owners want $750,000 for the works, but they will consider reasonable offers, they announced yesterday.

The property fronts 82 feet on Pennsylvania ave., with 90 feet on Jackson pl. It has been listed for sale with leading Washington brokers by Charles L. Walker, of New York, attorney for the owners.

Wilbur S. Finch, ranking administrative official here for the organization, said the proposed sale was part of a plan to combine the local office with the main headquarters in New York City.

Construction is to start soon, Finch added, on a new building in New York to house the enlarged force. About 20 persons are employed in the local office.

If the property is sold, the new owners would have to obtain approval of the United States Fine Arts Commission if they desired to remodel. The commission must pass on plans for all buildings fronting on Government parks, shrines and historical structures.

Settlement Reached for 300

Concrete Truck Driver Strike Is Averted on Eve of Walkout

A strike of 300 ready-mix concrete truck drivers, scheduled for 6:45 a. m. today, was averted by a settlement late yesterday afternoon.

Terms of the settlement will not be made public until after a meeting of the drivers, members of Local 639, AFL Teamsters, at 7 a. m. today at 1500 13th st. nw., according to Charles Bell, president of the local.

The settlement was unofficially reported to be an increase of 10 cents an hour, retroactive to July 11, the date of the settlement of the major construction strike here.

It was arrived at at a conference arranged by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service between Bell and representatives of three large ready-mix concrete companies.

Other companies, Bell said, will "go along" with the settlement.

As a result of the settlement, a possible new interruption of a number of major construction projects in the city was avoided. These include the Dupont Circle underpass, and the General Accounting Office building, as well as other public and commercial structures.

The drivers had been asking a 15-cent increase, retroactive to May 15, above their present $1.35 hourly pay. On Tuesday night, they voted to reject a management offer of a two-year contract from July 11 with a 5-cent increase this year and another 5 cents the second year, or a straight 7½ cent-an-hour raise for the two years.

Meanwhile, another cloud appeared on the construction labor horizon here. Officers of Local

French Assembly Approves Pact

The Gallup Poll

Arms Plan Favor Shown By Survey

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 27—As debate starts on the Administration's bill to rearm Europe, a special nationwide telegraphic survey conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows the weight of public opinion today in favor of the basic principles of the Truman proposal.

The nation's first reaction to the proposal shows opinion divided as follows on the question:

"Do you approve or disapprove of President Truman's plan, announced Monday, to send war materials and money to countries who want to build up their military defenses as a protection against Russia?"

Approve—49%.
Disapprove—38.
Qualified—3.
No opinion—10.

This figure compares with a vote of 67 per cent in favor of the Atlantic Pact as reported in July before Senate ratification.

The Institute conducted this 24-hour telegraphic survey through a new procedure which makes use of a nationwide panel of representative voters.

Paris, July 27 (NYHT).—The French National Assembly voted approval of the Atlantic Pact today by 397 to 189, despite the government's tacit admission that the defense treaty would not serve its purpose unless the United States made substantial aid available.

In the closing hours of the all-night debate, Foreign Minister Robert Schuman agreed that fears expressed by many orators were "fully justified." But he called unacceptable a Gaullist amendment that would have delayed ratification of the pact until there were enough American arms to enable France to fulfill her treaty obligations.

Schuman turned aside the Gaullist motion by agreeing that the government would "solemnly declare at the moment of ratification that the pact will be efficacious only if the dispositions of Articles 5 and 9 come into full play."

Article 5 provides that if any one of the 12 participating nations is attacked, the others will come to the victim's assistance. Article 9 sets up a council to coordinate defense.

Formal ratification will occur when President Vincent Auriol signs the document, after approval by the Advisory Council of the Republic.

Portuguese Assembly Ratifies Pact 80 to 3

Lisbon, Portugal, July 27 (AP).—The Portuguese National Assembly voted 80 to 3 today to ratify the North Atlantic Alliance.

U. S. Police Rescue Two Red Officers

Berlin, July 27 (U.P.).—Two Russian army officers were rescued tonight from a German "lynch mob" by German and American military police, German police reported.

Police said the Germans became infuriated when the Russians, one of them "obviously drunk," began making "obscene gestures" at passersby in the Schoeneberg district of the American sector.

A threatening crowd circled around the Russians, and soon grew to number between 2000 and 5000 persons. Many of the crowd's members were shouting threats.

"The crowd would have lynched them if the police had not arrived," a policeman at the Schoeneberg precinct station said.

Three German patrol cars and an American M. P. car dispersed the Germans before any harm came to the Russians, police said.

Police said one of the Russians menaced the crowd with a drawn pistol, but did not fire.

The pistol-brandishing officer, a lieutenant, was arrested and disarmed by Pvt. James Powell, Ottawa, Kan., and Pvt. Marion Litteral, Stockbridge, Mich.

The soldiers said the crowd was shouting "Kill him! Kill him!" as they pursued the Russian.

Hostage Hint

Americans Urged to Quit China

Secretary of State Acheson declared yesterday there is danger the Chinese Communists may treat as hostages some 4000 Americans who have failed to leave the country.

In a new appeal for those who can do so to depart, the Secretary acknowledged that under existing conditions the United States Government is unable to provide protection.

As further evidence of the Administration concern over developments in China, Acheson disclosed the formation of a three-man advisory group to help work out new policies for dealing with the Communists and coping with other difficulties resulting from events in the Far East.

The group is headed by Ambassador at Large Philip C. Jessup, who has been concerned with United Nations affairs.

Two Held in Office

On the perils faced by Americans in Communist-held Shanghai, Nanking and elsewhere, Acheson reported:

1. Chinese workers in a labor dispute have been holding two Americans captive in a Shanghai downtown office since noon, yesterday without food, water or sleep. They are Randall Gould, editor of the suspended Shanghai Evening Post and Mercury, and Charles Miner, Takoma Park, Md., representative of the owner, C. V. Starr.

Acheson said Consul General John M. Cabot protested to the police without result.

2. Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart has met with innumerable red tape obstacles in trying to leave Nanking by plane to return to the United States for consultations. The difficulties are over the people and records he wants to take with him. Acheson said he hopes Stuart will be able to settle the dispute soon.

Ward, Staff Getting Out

3. Consul Angus Ward and his staff, recalled weeks ago from Communist-held Mukden, Manchuria, have finally completed arrangements to leave. They are expected to get out in a few days.

Describing the situation as what might have been expected from the Communist conquest, rather than as a mounting crisis, Acheson said he can be quite sure the Americans still on the scene will be used as pressure points by the Communists. It is for their own safety that we suggested they should leave some time ago, he said.

In all China, the State Department lists 5023 Americans. These include 1140 in the British colony of Hongkong, who presumably do not face the immediate peril of those in Communist-held areas and in the South China areas now threatened by the renewed Communist advance.

China Forces Quit Hengyang In Flight From Communists

Hongkong, July 27 (U.P.).—Government informants said today that Pai Chung-Hsi, central China comamnder, has evacuated Hengyang, his latest headquarters in south central China, as the Communist drive south gathered momentum.

Pai, who has retreated more than 400 miles southward from Hankow, set up his headquarters at Hengyang only last week. Previously they were at Changsha, 100 miles north of Hengyang. His new headquarters are at Chuanhsien, 110 miles further south.

Reports reaching Hongkong indicated the Nationalist position was deteriorating more rapidly each day. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek held emergency conferences on Formosa with Li Tsung-jen, acting president, reportedly over measures to stem the Red advance.

Unofficial reports said the Communists already had captured Changsha and the railway junction of Chuchow, 30 miles south, where the Nationalists had been expected to make a major stand. Now the Red armies are threatening Hengyang.

The Communists' "western task force" of five armies was reported to have captured Changteh, 110 miles northwest of Changsha.

Philippine President Sees Truman Aug. 8

President Elipdio Quirino of the Philippines will visit President Truman August 8, the White House announced today.

ing perfectly free to exercise their prerogative to submit revisions.

As drafted, the arms bill would extend $1,093,450,000 cash for weapons, technical and training and, and for raw material for military production, to eight European members of the 12-nation treaty.

An additional $300,580,000 would go for similar purposes to Greece, Turkey, Korea, Iran and the Philippines.

The program would also include 450 million dollars' worth of excess military stocks, written off at rehabilitation cost, a 45 million "emergency fund," $10,970,000 for administration, and authority to place arms contracts for other nations that can pay for them.

Express Hope for Cut

Senator Dulles, acting on behalf of himself and Senator Vandenberg—both of whom favor some form of arms aid—conferred privately with Acheson Tuesday, to express the hope the Administration would voluntarily cut the figure.

Without this cut, Vandenberg, Dulles and others believe, the program will not get through the Senate. Less opposition to it has been expressed so far in the House.

Acheson, asked if the Administration will unveil secret reports on Russian armament in testimony on the bill, said all available information will be given, in committee sessions where security requires it.

He said he did not want to give the impression there is any greatly hush-hush Russian material involved. Much of the information about pact members is equally secret, he said.

Asked if he believes Russia is preparing for war, he replied, with a smile, that that is a loaded question. If he said yes or no, reporters would have a wonderful time with it, he noted, amid laughter.

Presented by Connally

The arms bill was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), who announced cosponsors were Senators Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), Theodore F. Green (D., R. I.), and Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.).

It will go to both the Foreign Relations Committee and the Senate Armed Services Committee for unusual joint hearings, where a total of 26 Senators—27 per cent of the Senate—will have a vote on it.

Connally said Senate hearings would not begin for about a week.

House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) announced he has invited members of the House Armed Services Committee to hearings as "observers and counsellors." They will not have a vote on the bill.

The National Military Establishment expressly noted that the Joint Chiefs of Staff do not plan to discuss the "military assistance program . . . during their forthcoming trip to Europe."

"The Joint Chiefs believe that there is no basis for such discussion by them until the Congress has acted on the President's recommendations."

To Study Conditions

In Europe, NME said, the military leaders "will discuss matters of mutual interest, including proposed military organization under the North Atlantic Pact, with the military chiefs of the European signatory nations . . . and will acquaint themselves with current conditions in Europe."

They will also "gain first hand information on the status of United States forces abroad.

Talks on pact aspects have already been conducted with a Canadian chiefs of staff representative, NME said.

The pact will not formally come into being until full ratification by France and the Netherlands, which were among the original negotiators.

While in France, it is likely that the United States staff chiefs will visit Fontainebleau, headquarters of British Field Marshal Montgomery, chief of staff of the defense committee established last year by the Brussels Treaty powers—Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

That defense organization, which has already held some joint maneuvers for participating powers and launched transfers of equipment, is to be worked into the North Atlantic Defense Council.

Its accomplihments and failings, it is believed, will serve as a guide for the larger defense grouping.

Bunche Urges Arms-Ban End

Lake Success, July 27 (NYHT).—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, United Nations acting mediator on Palestine, today recommended in his final report to the Security Council that the restrictive truce conditions be lifted in favor of the four armistice agreements signed by Israel and four Arab states.

One of the principal provisions was the ban on importing arms and other war materiel into the warring Jewish and Arab states. Yesterday Aubrey S. Eban, Israeli delegate to the U. N., expressed hope the Security Council would decide the Near East still is a "sensitive area" and would continue the embargo to prevent an arms race and a possible renewal of hostilities.

start from scratch when the bill comes out a second time.

So complex were the series of rulings and technicalities that bounced the bill around that Senators themselves were confused.

Vice President Barkley told newsmen he feared European participants in the Marshall Plan would "misunderstand" the action.

"The bill will pass, of course," said Barkley. "There is no question about that. What happened had nothing to do with the merits of the bill or the question of foreign aid. It concerned only the technical rules of the Senate."

Barkley himself touched off the parliamentary field day when sponsors and foes of the McClellan farm-surplus amendment pressed points of order at the day's outset in a strategic floor skirmish.

Senate Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.) made the point that the amendment was clearly legislation, and as such should be ruled out of the appropriation measure.

Senator McClellan, however, jockeyed Lucas out of position by raising the question of "germaneness" of his own farm-surplus amendment. Under the rules the Senate must decide whether an amendment is germane, so Barkley submitted the question to the Senate.

The Senate promptly voted, 54 to 32, that the McClellan amendment was germane.

The Senate split sharply on the Barkley ruling. Senator Taft (R., Ohio) leaped in to appeal from the decision of the chair. Taft said the point of order against legislation on an appropiration bill was a different question and wasn't settled by the Senate voting the amendment germane.

Rule books in hand Senators debated the technical point for two hours. Southern Democrats split on the question after Senator Anderson (D., N. Mex.) knowingly suggested that civil rights amendments could be offered to appropriation bills, and adopted by a majority vote, if Barkley's ruling were sustained.

Party lines splintered in the ensuing debate and in the end Barkley's ruling was overturned, 51 to 38.

Lucas renewed his point of order that the McClellan amendment, as legislation, had no place in an appropriation bill. His decision reversed by the Senate, this time Barkley had to uphold the Lucas point. He struck the McClellan amendment from the bill.

McClellan retaliated with a point of order against the bill itself. He read a string of legislative provisions in other amendments approved by the committee.

Under Senate rules, when a point of order is sustained against the whole bill the entire measure automatically goes back to committee. Since the bill is studded with legislation, Barkley said, he had "no other course" but to sustain McClellan's point.

17 Britons Tour D. C., Get Hints on Building

A Yorkshire plumber, a London carpenter and a Dundee engineer toured Washington yesterday with 14 other representatives of the British building industry, to absorb American techniques.

They are 10 days along on a seven-week study of United States building, sponsored by the ECA.

The Britons were honored at a lunch yesterday by the District Building Trades Council of the American Federation of Labor at the Hamilton Hotel. Calling themselves a "team," the visitors represent building labor, employers, architects, engineers and contractors.

One British labor leader said yesterday he was chiefly interested in discovering how "you Americans can command the high wage of $2.20 an hour, and still keep costs down low enough t oencourage builders to build."

"If we can learn that while we're over here, British builders are in for a bit of negotiating," he said.

Michael Waterhouse, president of the Royal Institute of Architects, said the group had a common interest in good building, and a desire to take back the best of American building practice.

committee who had expressed concern lest the AEC was exceeding the law in exchanging information with the British expressed some gratification after yesterday's meetings.

On Different Level

At present, Hickenlooper told reporters, it is his understanding, based on assurances from top United States officials, that exchanges of information with British and Canadians have been on a level below that of industrial production and weapon information.

Exchange of such information with any other nation is specifically banned by law, except by express permission of the Congress.

"I feel confident, based on assurances given yesterday," Hickenlooper said," that no attempt will be made to by-pass the Congress or the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy."

The exploratory discussions with the British and Canadians, Acheson told the committee, would give the executive and legislative branches of the Government time to consult further with each other.

So far, the United States is largely dependent upon Great Britain and Canada for its supplies of uranium—the key source material for the atomic bomb.

A group of Colorado producers yesterday contended such dependence is unnecessary.

Fendal A. Sitton of Dove Creek, Colo., president of the Uranium Vanadium Cooperation Association, said he told Colorado Senators Eugene Millikin (R.) and Edwin C. Johnson (D.) that this country can produce sufficient uranium if the mining industry is given "a feasible price." He said he spoke for about 100 small producers.

McMahon said that Acheson felt that further exploratory talks would not only permit conferences between the two governmental branches in this country but promote understanding with Great Britain and Canada.

"Moreover, talks between the United States, Britain and Canada would acquaint each with the others' viewpoint and thus permit all concerned to proceed with added perspective," McMahon said.

"As had been explained to the committee previously," McMahon said, "no agreement would be concluded and no change whatsoever in existing arrangements would be made until the results of the talks had been made known to and discussed with the Joint Committee. At that time it could be determined what congressional action is needed."

President Truman initiated the top-level secret atomic conferences with a meeting at his Blair House residence two weeks ago.

The flat assurance from the President, delivered by Acheson, that Congress will not be by-passed halts a considerable amount of congressional speculation over the possibility the Atomic Energy Act of 1946 might be ignored by the executive branch.

Great Britain and Canada played what AEC members describe as an "important" part in the development of the atomic bomb and up until 1946 had complete access to all this Nation's information.

The law closed the door to both countries, however, except in nine general fields largely related to basic research.

Pastor Who Eloped With Girl, 15, Slain

W. C. CORNELIUS

THE REV. J. P. LANE

Tampa, Fla., July 27 (U.P.).—A father's grief over the elopement of his 15-year-old organist daughter with her minister exploded into vengeful fury today and the Rev. John Lane, 31, was shot to death.

Ward Cornelius, 57, father of Lane's bride of a month, met his son-in-law accidentally in downtown Tampa and after a brief argument shot him five times.

Arrested an hour later, Cornelius, a husky, tanned railroad man, asked calmly: "Is the guy dead?" Told that he was, Cornelius replied:

"Thank God."

Then he poured out the story of his brooding grief since his daughter, Ann, a high school sophomore, ran away with the newly divorced Lane, himself the father of three, a month ago, and married him in Ashburn, Ga.

Cornelius vowed at the time, officers said, that he would go after Lane and "thrash the tar out of him" except that "I was too durned poor."

Lane left a note of resignation from his Florida ave. Baptist church when he eloped with the girl. They later returned to Florida and Lane had been doing YMCA work at Pasco, 20 miles from here.

Lane had often taken the attractive organist and other church young people to a drive-in near the church after evening services.

Mrs. Cornelius said they then started going with each other but Lane would lend his car to a youth known to the family to take Ann home so that parental suspicions would not be aroused.

But two weeks before the elopement, she said, she had an idea her daughter was seeing the minister and she forbade her to do so again. She objected, she said, because Lane's wife only had recently divorced him for desertion.

Policy 'Fix' Suspect Flier To Tell Story

New York, July 27 (U.P.).—Dennison Duble, 67, white-haired secretary of the Cincinnati Clearing House Association, arrived by plane here today and was taken immediately to the district attorney's office to tell of his part in a multimillion-dollar policy ring.

Duble was startled to see a small army of newspaper photographers awaiting him.

"What's all this monkey business about?" he said. "I never saw such monkey business, golly Ned."

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said Duble juggled daily bank clearing figures, used by the numbers ring in paying off, so that there were the fewest possible winners.

Dignified, nattily dressed in a powder blue suit, a lemon-colored shirt and red tie, Duble appeared on the friendliest of terms with the police officers who accompanied him here and soon with those who met him.

As he was driven away in a police car, he put his arm around the shoulder of Assistant District Attorney William Grafenecker.

Six other men were arrested in New York and four in New Jersey in connection with the 50-million-dollar-a-year racket.

Detective, Alleged Hague Supporter, Gets Foot Duty

Jersey City, N. J., July 27 (U.P.).—Detective John Bishop, who yesterday overpowered a berserk gunman on a downtawn street, today was demoted to pounding a beat.

Bishop knocked down and disarmed Thomas Byrne, a deaf mute, after Byrne had killed one man and shot another. He is held for psychiatric examination.

Bishop's demotion to the rank of patrolman had gone through several days ago and was to become effective today.

st. railroad bridge they were thirsty. They tied the canoe to the bridge and started swimming ashore to get a drink of water on Hains Point.

They had swum about 100 yards. Jill, ahead, reached the seawall—glanced casually back. Odle wasn't in sight. Frantically she swam back out, saw him . . . his glasses had fallen off.

"He dived for them," she said, "and didn't come up. I tried to catch him. I got hold of his hand but he slipped away."

A Fire Department rescue squad, aided by construction workers on the bridge nearby, brought up Odle's body.

Odle had recovered his glasses . . . one hand clutched tightly to them.

When Jill's father, Francis Kidwell, arrived at Park Police headquarters, his daughter collapsed sobbing into his arms.

Odle and Jill had lived next door to each other for 12 years. Young Porter was graduated from the Hargrave (Va.) Military Academy last spring.

His mother said her son was a "pretty good" swimmer. But she had no idea, she said, that he had gone swimming in the Potomac.

Girl, 17, Freed in Slaying Of Her Middle-Aged Lover

Waukegan, Ill., July 27 (U.P.).—Pretty blonde Joyce Schumaker, a 17-year-old choir singer, tonight was acquitted of charges she murdered her middle-aged married lover.

A jury of six men and six women deliberated only 39 minutes before freeing her of the first-degree murder charge brought in the death of Carl Reeder, 53, a clerk in the high school she attended.

Joyce had testified Reeder was shot accidently April 14 when she tried to "scare" him into breaking off the affair.

She admitted responding to his attentions beginning in 1947 when she was a student at Waukegan High School and he was the school clerk.

She acknowledged she was intimate with him, before she learned he was married, and even though she knew he was old enough to be my grandfather."

But the girl pictured Reeder as an aging wolf who followed her on the streets with his car, sought dates with her, wanted to marry her and once threatened to kill her with a butcher knife because she wouldn't.

She said they were in his car parked on the shores of Lake Michigan when Reeder grasped her gun and it "went off." She admitted, however, she had told a policeman after her arrest that "I murdered him (Reeder)."

Her testimony was the opposite from State contentions she romanced Reeder and killed him because he wouldn't get a divorce and marry her.

Earlier she had told how Reeder stopped her in the high school gymnasium and began asking her for dates. He asked her to kiss him on the first date, she said, but she demurred until the second.

Reeder, Miss Schumaker said, passed himself off as 39 and unmarried.

She was asked if she ever had been intimate with Reeder.

"Yes," she replied, "before I knew he was married."

JUDGE CARPENTER and MRS. CARPENTER

JOHN LOCKWOOD

Georgia Attorneys Now Bitter Enemies In Divorce, Tax Cases

Atlanta, July 27 (AP).—An Atlanta judge early today wounded in the face his once close associate, now a bitter opponent in suits involving divorce, slander and income tax.

Police reported Fulton Civil Court Judge Robert Carpenter, 44, fired five times at John Lockwood, 53, a lawyer.

Then, the officers said, Carpenter chased the wounded man until he fell into a mud-bottomed excavation, 40 feet deep.

A hospital reported Lockwood was in satisfactory condition.

Judge Carpenter was booked on a charge of shooting and was released from jail on $500 bond.

Chief Civil Court Judge Quincy Arnold said no more cases would be scheduled before Carpenter until the charge against him is disposed of.

Lockwood was once Carpenter's attorney. They split when the judge's wife, Mrs. Helen Carpenter, filed a divorce action against him, charging cruelty.

Carpenter countered with a divorce action alleging Lockwood had joined with Mrs. Carpenter in an effort to defraud him of control of the Imperial Hotel, and that they planned to marry.

Mrs Carpenter Comforts Lookwood

Mrs. Carpenter held Lockwood's hand as he was wheeled on a stretcher into a hospital emergency room this morning.

"Darling, you're going to be all right," she said as she leaned over him.

Other court suits involved include:

A $100,000 alienation of affection suit filed by Mrs. Carpenter against Mrs. Estelle Manful.

A suit filed by Lockwood against Carpenter claiming the judge owed him $10,000 for legal services in getting Carpenter's Federal income tax assessments and fraud penalties cut from $42,097, plus $6000 interest, to $27,346.

A $100,000 slander suit filed by Lockwood against Carpenter, claiming Carpenter maliciously circulated a report that Lockwood and Mrs. Carpenter had spent three days together in Florida, when Carpenter knew it was untrue.

A $10,511 lien filed by the Federal Government against Carpenter for income taxes for 1944 through 1946.

Krupa Wars On Marijuana

Detroit, July 27 (U.P.).—Drummer Gene Krupa, whose band was barred from a dancehall because three of his musicians pleaded guilty to narcotics charges, said today he plans a personal campaign against marijuana smoking.

"Even if I never make another penny as a drummer, I'm going to do everything in my power to stop musicians from using dope," he said.

Krupa, 40, said his 1943 conviction on a similar charge "taught me the hard way that marijuana or any drug can ruin a musician." He said he hoped the publicity given the arrests would result in a "general cleanup" of all bands.

"Plenty of bands have 'reefer' smokers," Krupa said.

Krupa said the American Federation of Musicians (AFL) had promised him "full cooperation" in his battle to collect for the three days an amusement park lopped off the band's scheduled week's engagement at Eastwood Gardens.

U. S. District Attorney Edward Kane and Federal narcotics agents searched Krupa's own baggage and found no narcotics.

Two of the bandsmen were arrested early Sunday and one yesterday. In each case, a teen-aged Michigan girl was found in their hotel rooms.

Boy, 2, Wins Death Race With Peanut in Lung

Buffalo, N. Y., July 27 (U.P.).—Two-year-old Gerald W. Rease raced death for 44 miles with a peanut in his lung and won. But he won't get any more peanuts for years.

The boy's father, Stephen Rease, a Silver Springs, N. Y., grocer, said the peanut a physician took from his son's lung today would be the last in the Rease home until Gerald and his two brothers are grown up.

Last night Gerald took one of the nuts from a jar. He began to gasp for breath. His face turned blue.

His parents took him to Warsaw Hospital but it was not equipped with a bronchoscope to remove the peanut from Gerald's lung. Quickly, police were arranged for the 44-mile ride to Children's Hospital, Buffalo.

A few minutes after the Reases arrived at the hospital a physician removed the nut.

Juvenile Gang Rounded Up In Safe Haul

$2587 haul on a safe job three weeks ago has been rounded up with the arrest of five boys, ranging in age from 14 to 17, police said yesterday.

Police said the boys have admitted between 25 and 30 housebreakings, the most profitable one a safe robbery on July 9 at Steaks, Inc., 474 L st. nw.

The boys were said to have told police they had squandered the $2587 taken from the safe on dice games, clothes, and a trip to Philadelphia.

On the same night, they said, they also broke into the Afro-American newspaper office, 1800 11th st. nw., but were unable to open the safe.

Police said the boys also have admitted trying to open a safe at Marvin's Warehouse, 32 L st. nw. However, they denied taking $1000 worth of television equipment and lamps reported stolen.

Parked cars and trucks also were looted by the gang. And in another operation, police said, they stole frozen meats from freight cars in the Eckington yards, cut them up and sold them.

Police said two of the boys are escapees from the training school at Blue Plains, one is a parolee from the same institution, and two are escapees from the Receiving Home.

Working on the case were Precinct Detectives E. L. Hayes and M. L. Bailey and Plainsclothesmen L. V. Denny and C. L. Eilert, all of the Second Precinct.

Youth Found Shot; Note Tells of Love

A 17-year-old Washington youth was found yesterday in his home with a bullet wound in his side—and near him a note which police said indicated he attempted suicide because of disappointment in a love affair.

The boy was in fair condition in Gallinger Hospital last night.

His brother said the boy had returned recently from a vacation in North Carolina, where he had seen a teen-age sweetheart whom he had known since they were children.

The boy, said the brother showed how he had the girl's name inscribed on the inside of his identification bracelet and told how she had put his name on hers.

The girl is only in high school but the youth, said his brother, has been trying to work things out so he could give up his job here and join her in North Carolina.

The youth was found by a neighbor who lives in the same house. The wound had been inflicted with a .22-caliber rifle.

Judge to Aid Wife Beater

A 28-year-old man who had been a war prisoner of the Japanese for four years was convicted yesterday of beating his wife, but Judge Thomas D. Quinn refused to send him to jail.

The Municipal Court jurist was obviously touched by the condition of the defendant, Raymond E. Campbell, of 325 11th st. sw.

"You don't want to break up your home and I don't want to see you do it," said Judge Quinn.

Campbell was then released on his personal bond to reappear in the court this morning. Quinn said Campbell was apparently suffering from a nervous ailment and the court would attempt to get the defendant admitted to a Veterans' Administration hospital for treatment. Campbell recently left such an institution.

The wife, Lena Campbell, 28, said that her husband's abuse was a "regular occurrence." She said that on July 25 she awakened him and told him their 2½-year-old son was very ill.

"I didn't know how I was going to pay the doctor's bills because I was not able to keep on working as hard as I am working," she said.

She said that he knocked her off the bed and then off a chair. He slapped, shook and choked her, she testified.

Then, he broke about 50 phonograph records and his radio, saying, "You made me break my favorite radio," she testified.

During an intermission in the case, Judge Quinn directed Mrs. Campbell to talk to her husband and for 20 minutes they conversed between bars.

Campbell admitted that he was distressed, saying that he had called his wife at least eight times Tuesday evening and that he could not reach her. He said he believed she loved their son and money more than him.

Boat Accident Victim Better; Mother Dead

Salisbury, Md., July 27 (AP).—Charles H. Leaman, jr., 32, is reported in satisfactory condition today with injuries from a boating accident that took the life of his mother. His arm and leg were mangled badly by the propeller of a fishing boat that fatally cut his mother, Margaret.

Rex Beach Improves

Miami, Fla., July 27 (AP).—Rex Beach, 71, one of America's best-known authors was reported slightly improved today after being flown here from his ranch at Sebring in serious condition Sunday.

Body of Missing Baby Found in Drainage Ditch

Grand Junction, Colo., July 27 (AP).—The body of 15-month-old Joan Fowler, who disappeared from her home last night, was found today in a drainage ditch a half-mile away.

The child apparently fell into the ditch and drowned. Several hundred persons searched for her through the night.

A pet monkey was shot here this morning after entering a house and biting a woman and there were fears that the animal might have had something to do with the child's disappearance. The idea was discounted by officers, however.

Defendant Says Killing Details Hazy

New York, July 27 (AP).—Martha Beck swore today that her jealous rage and a slap administered by Mrs. Janet Fay blacked out her knowledge of what occurred when the Albany, N. Y., widow was killed.

The 29-year-old divorcee testified she found Mrs. Fay dead at her feet after Raymond Fernandez, 34, her Lonely Hearts murder trial codefendant, "had me by the shoulders and was shaking me."

Plump Mrs. Beck and Fernandez are on trial in the bludgeon-strangulation slaying of Mrs. Fay, 66, last January 4 at Valley Stream, N. Y.

The 200-pound Mrs. Beck testified that her jealous rage was caused by an intimate approach Fernandez said the widow made toward him early on the fatal morning.

She said Mrs. Fay, who shared the bedroom with her, awakened her and asked about intimacies concerning Fernandez. A little later she said Mrs. Fay went to the living room where Fernandez slept on a couch.

In a few minutes Fernandez rushed into the bedroom and asked her to bring Mrs. Fay back to bed, that he was going to the bathroom.

Mrs. Beck said she found Mrs. Fay nude on the couch. Burning "with jealousy and anger," she said, she reprimanded the widow, who drew back her hand and administered the slap.

"And the next thing I knew," Mrs. Beck said, "Ray had me by the shoulders and was shaking me."

Mrs. Beck testified yesterday that Fernandez is "just everything that a woman could ask for in a man."

Woman's Hotel Death Natural

Baltimore, July 27 (AP).—Medical examiners reported today that Jean McLaurin Watts, 37-year-old daughter of a Lynchburg, Va., banker and businessman, died of natural causes in a small hotel here yesterday.

Police released a ship's radio operator they had held almost 24 hours for questioning. They said the man, Mecom Morris, 50, of New Orleans, and Miss Watts had been registered at the hotel as man and wife since Thursday.

She became ill Monday and was treated by a doctor. Morris said he could not arouse her when he returned to the room yesterday afternoon from a trip downstairs.

Miss Watts was born in Lynchburg, and attended Randolph-Macon College and Smith College. She traveled much abroad, and was presented at the Court of St. James's several years ago. She was married in 1944 to a Florida resident then working in Baltimore. They were divorced in 1946, and Miss Watts resumed her maiden name.

Last 2 Freed in Cohen Case

Los Angeles, July 27 (U.P.).—The sheriff's office freed the last two suspects in the gangland shooting of Mickey Cohen today and then began an intensive review of half a dozen recent underworld murders.

"They all tie together," In-Anthony Trombino, 29, and Tony Brancato, 34, a pair of former Kansas City hoodlums named by State Attorney General Fred N. Howser as "hot suspects" in the shooting last week of Cohen and three others, were released from county jail.

They had been booked on suspicion of attempted murder.

Australia Sends Troops To Struck Coal Mines

Sydney, Australia, July 27 (U.P.).—The Australian government today ordered the first convoys of troops into the coal fields to prepare to work open-cut mines Tuesday unless the Communist-led miners end their crippled midwinter strike.

No DP Bill Plans, McCarran Asserts

By the United Press

Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee said yesterday he has no plans for action on the liberalized Displaced Persons legislation.

McCarran said at a hearing of his Immigration Subcommittee that he saw "no reason" for rushing changes in the present DP law, labeled discriminatory by President Truman, nor for taking any action to increase the DP quotas until next May.

He said it will be next year before the entire 205,000 persons allowed to enter under present legislation will have arrived. Yesterday he denounced as a "despicable charge, wholly at variance with the facts," the President's assertion that the present law discriminates against Jews and Catholics.

A group of Republicans, headed by Senator Irving M. Ives (N. Y.) Homer Ferguson, Mich., plan to try to force action at this session to remove the clauses which have been labeled discriminatory.

McCarran said that before voting new legislation, Congress should consider the economic side of the question. He pointed out that unemployment in this country now totals 3,500,000 and said it might rise to 8 million. The Housing situation also must be considered, he added.

transfers of officers from one service to another.

4. The name of the War Council will be changed to the Armed Forces Policy Council.

5. Defense Secretary Johnson will name the new Comptroller of the Department of Defense, who will not be subject to confirmation. His salary will be $14,000 a year.

Powers Unimpaired

6. Provision that with passage of the bill, President Truman's Reorganization Order No. 8, dealing with the same subject, will become null and void. But the President's power to make further changes in the armed forces under his reorganization authority is unimpaired.

7. The House Committee's language, expressing the "intent of Congress" in enacting the bill, was accepted almost intact. It contains a declaration opposing creation of a single chief of staff over the armed forces or establishment of an armed forces general staff.

8. Military and civilian heads of the Army, Navy and Air Force specifically are guaranteed the right to present any report or recommendation to Congress on their own initiative after notifying the Secretary of Defense they are going over his head.

9. Secretary of Defense Johnson, before issuing any reorganization or transfer order substantially affecting the statutory functions of the services, must report his intention to Congress. He must also report twice instead of once a year to Congress and cite progress in unification and savings made.

"Business Manager" Set Up

Despite these limitations on the power of the Secretary, other provisions not in dispute during the conference provide for the main points of the Administration's unification program. They are:

1. Creation of a Department of Defense and reduction of the Departments of Army, Navy and Air Force to the status of military departments.

2. Expansion and clarification of the powers of the Defense Secretary.

3. Establishment of a chairman for the joint chiefs.

4. Reform of armed forces' fiscal practices, including creation of a "business manager" for the new department.

Stalin 'Mainstay' Of Europe Peace, Says G. B. Shaw

London, July 27 (AP).—George Bernard Shaw described Prime Minister Stalin of Russia tonight as "the mainstay of peace in Europe," and charged that the Western powers' commanders in Berlin started the cold war.

Shaw said the Russians would shoot Stalin if they thought he was trying to start another war.

He said the Western commander in Berlin "began the cold war by annoying the Russian occupants in every possible way short of opening fire on them."

His views were in a letter to Konni Zilliacus, member of Parliament, who recently was kicked out of Britain's ruling Labor Party for opposing its foreign policy.

Testimony of U. S. Aide Caused His Discharge, He Says

Frankfurt, Germany, July 27 (AP). Charles H. Collison testified today that he was fired as deputy chief of the United States decartelization authority in Germany for testifying before an Army-appointed committee.

The committee, headed by Garland S. Ferguson of the Federal Trade Commission, investigated the breaking up of German industrial combines.

Collison told a military government grievance committee that his superior, Richardson Bronson, was "angry at the committee, angry at its report and angry at me for testifying."

Collison asserted that Bronson fired him and "literally ran me out of my office" as a result of the testimony he gave the committee.

The grievance committee will recommend whether Collison's dismissal should be sustained or reversed.

Truman Gets Bill to Ease FHA Curbs

The Senate yesterday unanimously approved and sent to the White House a bill providing for Federal Housing Administration insurance on housing in the vicinity of military posts.

The bill is designed to relieve housing shortages around military installations. The house approved it by voice vote earlier in the day.

The act provides for easing of FHA requirements for mortgage insurance. FHA has held that rental units on and near military posts often can't meet the "acceptable risk" provisions of present law.

The legislation would relax these provisions so FHA can insure the mortgages anyway.

Pantheist Refuses Oath, Sues for Post

A Brentwood, Md., councilman-elect has asked the Prince Georges County Circuit Court to require the town to seat him on the council despite his refusal to take the required oath of office because of his religious beliefs.

The elected councilman, 40-year-old J. Milton Stanford, who says he is a pantheist, objects to the part of the oath that requires him to swear to the statement: "I believe in the Christian religion."

Stanford, who lives at 4409 40th st., was elected to a second term on the town council without opposition on June 27. He was refused a council seat July 27 by a majority vote of the other members after he objected to the oath.

He explained yesterday that when he took the oath at the time of his first election to the town governing body he was merely required to swear: "I believe in God."

This he felt he could conscientiously do, he said, because Pantheists believe in God in a broad sense.

Asked for a definition of Pantheism, Stanford referred to Webster's dictionary. Pantheism, it says, is the doctrine that "the universe, taken or conceived of as a whole, is God; the doctrine that there is no God but the combined forces and laws which are manifested in the existing universe."

After taking the oath in 1947, Stanford said, he decided to look in the State constitution and found that the oath does not contain any passage referring to religion. He determined that he would not swear to the oath again if the problem arose.

Stanford said he referred the matter to Mayor James L. Russell, who turned it over to town attorney Vance V. Vaughan. Vaughan amended the oath to include belief in the Christian religion after reading Article 70, section 9 of the Annoted Code of Maryland. It reads in part: "It shall only be necessary for an officer who is required to take and subscribe the oath prescribed by the sixth section of the First Article of the Constitution to declare orally at the time his belief in the Christian religion, or if he profess to be a Jew, of his belief in a future state of rewards and punishments . . ."

Article I, section 6, of the Maryland Constitution, governing the taking of oaths, says: "I, ..., do swear (or affirm, as the case may be), that I will support the Constitution of the United States; and that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to the State of Maryland, and support the Constitution and laws thereof; and that I will, to the best of my skill and judgment, diligently and faithfully, without partiality or prejudice, execute the office of..... according to the Constitution and laws of this State."

Stanford said he undrestood the phrase referring to Jews and the belief in the hereafter to apply to non-Jews by implication and that it is this part to which he objects since Pantheists do not believe in a hereafter.

Stanford, an investigator with the Civil Service Commission, said he is perfectly willing to swear to the oath prescribed by the State constitution, but that "I can't honestly make the statement called for by section 9 of Article 70 of the Maryland code."

In support of the amended form of the town oath, Vaughan yesterday declared "in my opinion a person is not qualified to hold office if he doesn't believe in the Christian religion."

After the council refused to seat him, Stanford first appealed to Governor William Preston Lane, jr. He said the code violates Federal constitutional provisions because it abridges his right to hold office, deprives citizens of the right to elect whom they will, violates the separation of church and state and is class legislation.

Lane referred the appeal to Attorney General Hall Hammond, who suggested that Stanford seek court relief. Stanford said he forewarded the papers in the suit to the clerk of the Circuit Court yesterday afternoon by registered mail.

Civil Air Patrol To 'Swap' Cadets With 4 Nations

The Civil Air Patrol yesterday announced an extensive program for exchanging air cadets this summer with Canada, England, France and Switzerland as an "air age approach to the promotion of understanding among nations."

Thirty-five cadets from England, France and Switzerland will be flown to Washington in a United States Air Force Constellation on August 8 for a two-week visit at Air Force bases, aircraft plants and points of tourist interest. At the same time, 25 American cadets will visit Britain with a side trip to see the Berlin airlift. Five will go to France and five to Switzerland.

Twenty-six Canadian air cadets will make an air tour of the western half of the United States meanwhile, and a like number of Americans will visit Canada.

Czech Envoy Criticized to Senate Unit

By the United Press

A Senate Judiciary Subcommittee was told yesterday that Dr. Vladimir Outrata, Czech Ambassador to the United States, "overstepped the bounds" of diplomatic immunity by threatening American citizens of Czech descent who opposed the new Communist regime in Czechoslovakia.

The charge was made by Andrew J. Valuchek of New York, president of the Slovak National Alliance of America. The subcommittee is studying legislation to control the activities of allegedly subversive aliens who enter this country under diplomatic immunity.

Valuchek testified that the Czech National Council of America passed a resolution, during its recent congress in Chicago, expressing "dismay" over the destruction of democracy in their homeland.

Outrata was given a copy of the resolution, he said, and promptly replied with a blistering attack on the council.

He quoted the Ambassador as saying in a letter:

"The Czechoslovakian people value every expression of sympathy, and will remember all those who in this difficult historical period will display their friendship. But they will not forget insults either.

"I wish that the members of your organization would as soon as possible and completely unsnare yourselves from the trap of propaganda so diabolically inimical to the Czech and Slovak people."

Valuchek said the letter amounted to "abuse of American citizens, and direct threat to Americans." Furthermore, he asserted, the Ambassador "overstepped the bounds of his rights and responsibilitie as a diplomat."

House Votes Bill to Aid Fight on Grasshoppers

The House passed yesterday a bill making an emergency allotment of $1,500,000 to fight grasshoppers in Western and Midwestern States. The legislation now goes to the Senate.

President Truman had asked for $3,500,000 to combat the grasshopper threat to farms but the Appropriations Committee trimmed it to $1,500,000. The committee said the smaller amount is all that can be spent economically and prudently at this time.

U. N. Protests to U. S. on Witness' Charge

General. He said in effect the internal affairs of the U. N. are no business of a Senate subcommittee.

Price, former wartime director of censorship for the United States, dispatched the letter to Acheson yesterday. He informed Acheson the U. N. is deeply concerned and asked for the United States Government's views on the matter.

The protest grew out of the release last Saturday by the subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee of the charges by the mystery witness.

Express Indignation

Before Price wrote Acheson, high secretariat officials expressed indignation because the witness did not come out in the open. The staff committee of the U. N. workers has approved a resolution voicing its support of Lie and denouncing the charges.

Prices called Acheson's attention to the subcommittee's release of testimony "which included irresponsible and unfounded attacks on the integrity of the Secretary-General and of certain members of the secretariat."

He said it appeared the subcommittee has misunderstood the basic principles on which the U. N. was founded. He said these principles were accepted by each member government when it ratified the U. N. Charter.

Doesn't Know Witness

..White said the State Department had not yet received Price's communication.

"Insofar as witness is concerned, the Department does not know who the secret witness before the subcommittee was and cannot therefore say what might have motivated this person to make such a statement," he declared.

"The Department and the United States mission to the United Nations do know Secretary-General Lie and Mr. Byron Price, who is the assistant Secretary-General in charge of administration in the secretariat, and have great confidence in their ability and integrity. We are confident that the U. N. would not tolerate a situation like that described by the anonymous witness."

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said that if Price thinks the mystery witness' testimony was irresponsible, "let him read the testimony that came from the Central Intelligence Agency and the Attorney General, all of which was given under subpoena."

He also said that the testimony of the mystery witness was given under oath.

As to destroying the U. N. by making the Secretary-General answerable to national legislatures, McCarran said:

"Whoever made that statement doesn't know what he is talking about. It shows he has no knowledge of the significance of the testimony."

Cites Origin of U. N.

Price said great pains were taken by founders of the U. N. to make certain it would be truly international, having in its staff nationals from all member countries. The Secretary-General was made the chief administrative officer, answerable to the General Assembly.

"In view of the plain responsibilities of the Secretary-General under the Charter, I am compelled to point out that the internal administration of the secretariat is the responsibility of the Secretary-General and the General Assembly," Price wrote.

"All of the official acts and policies of the Secretary-General are under constant and thorough review by competent committees of the General Assembly; and through these committees, member governments have opportunity to inquire as fully as they desire into the efficiency and impartiality of the administration of the secretariat.

"If the Secretary-General were to be answerable, in addition, to committees of national legislatures, all possibility of the successful existence of the United Nations as an international organization would be destroyed. This was foreseen clearly when the Charter was written and submitted to member nations for their acceptance or rejection. It would be tragic if it were forgotten now."

Lie on Vacation

Lie, a Norwegian and former Foreign Minister of that country, is in Norway on vacation. He is expected to return next month.

One point in the testimony before the subcommittee was that Lie is subservient to eastern European countries.

Lie himself has made repeated public declarations that he regards himself as an international civil servant, responsible only to the General Assembly orders.

The mystery witness was reported to have told the subcommittee that Arkady A. Sobolev, a Soviet citizen, demanded loyalty from some U. N. employes.

The top Russian delegate here, Semyon K. Tsarapkin, was asked if he had any comment on that allegation. Tsarapkin smiled and said: "No comment—because we have had much nonsense from the Hill (the Capitol) in Washington."

Krug Submits Plan, Urges Speed on CVA

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug yesterday sent a joint Reclamation Bureau-Army Engineers plan for development of the Columbia River Basin to President Truman.

In a letter with the report, Krug told the President that the plan is far from satisfactory, but that a "truly comprehensive" and "fully effective mechanism" cannot be achieved under existing laws.

Krug called for prompt setting up of a Columbia Valley Authority, built on the model of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

With the report, Krug enclosed correspondence from the governors and other officials of States in the Columbia Basin, generally approving the proposal.

These letters brought a fiery challenge from the National Committee on Resources. Benton J. Stong, executive secretary, termed the program a "Pick-Straus defense against a CVA." The term referred to Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Chief of Engineers, and Michael W. Straus, Commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, authors of the report.

Stong declared "the private power industry held and guided the hands of at least two Governors and one State engineer as they wrote their approval of the Pick-Straus plan."

"Almost identical statements in the communications of Governor John W. Bonner of Montana, Governor C. A. Robins of Idaho and State Engineer L. C. Bishop of Wyoming on transmission lines are a dead giveaway . . . of the drive to put over the Pick-Straus plan for the Columbia River instead of a CVA," Stong declared.

Krug wrote to Mr. Truman "The reports represent a substantial step forward toward the goal of full development of the resources of the Pacific Northwest.

"The proposals presented appear to represent the most practicable plan obtainable under the present Federal pattern of piecemeal legislation and divided administration for resource development.

"The establishment of a Columbia Valley Administration, which you have recommended, would eliminate the existing statutory and administrative deficiencies and would result in the speedier, more effective and more economical development of the resources of the Columbia Basin.

"However, . . . these reports do provide an inventory and framework which should be extremely valuable to the Columbia Valley Administration."

The plan, in general, is similar to one proposed early in 1948. Changes were put in to meet a repetition of conditions that caused the disastrous flood that hit the Columbia Valley last summer.

It also recommends establishment of a Basin Account, which would use the region's vast power revenue to finance irrigation projects "beyond the ability of the water users to repay in full."

The works proposed would cost 619 million dollars, Krug said, and would provide for 3,800,000 acres of new irrigated land, development of a hydroelectric power potential of 30 million kilowatts, improvement of navigation, forest management, propagation of fish and wildlife, recreational development, etc.

Transportation Safer Last Year Than in Decade

Chicago, July 27 (AP).—U. S. transportation was safer last year than at any time during the last 10 years, the National Safety Council says.

The combined death rate for passenger automobiles, taxis, buses, trains and airliners was 1.8 deaths per 100 million passenger miles. A passenger mile represents one passenger carried one mile.

Comparative records have been kept only during the last decade.

The railroads had the lowest death rate—0.13 per 100 million passenger miles. Buses were second, with a rate of 0.18. The airplane rate was 1.3, and that for passenger automobiles and taxis, 2.1.

4 Senators Win Seat Decisions

The Senate Rules Committee yesterday upheld the election of four Senators, from West Virginia, Texas, Oklahoma and Michigan, whose seating had been contested.

Committee Counsel Turner Smith told a reporter that the committee action is final in the Texas contest between Senator Johnson and his defeated opponent, former Governor Coke Stevenson, and in the Oklahoma primary contest involving Senator Kerr and Gomer Smith, Democrats.

The committee recommended Senate adoption of its findings in the contests involving Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and Tom Sweeney, Republican, dating from the 1946 general election, and in the Michigan contest involving Senator Ferguson (R.) and former Representative Frank Hook.

Smith explained committee action is final in the Texas and Oklahoma contests since no formal petitions were filed. Johnson defeated Stevenson by the close margin of 87 votes in the 1948 primary. Complaints were filed by individual residents of that State. Complaints by individual citizens also were filed in the Kerr-Smith contest in Oklahoma in which Kerr won in the 1948 run-off primary.

In the West Virginia contest growing out of the 1946 general election, Sweeney charged vote buying and other irregularities. In the Michigan contest Hook complained of voting irregularities and miscounting of ballots after Senator Ferguson was declared the winner in the 1948 general election.

Sales Tax Cost Ruled Out by Cogswell As Factor in Petition for Rent Increase

The District rent control office yesterday received its first petition for a rent increase listing the sales tax as partial justification for the requested rent boost.

Robert F. Cogswell, local rent control administrator, immediately dubbed the contemplated extra cost of the sales levy to landlords as an "improper" justification for rent increases—"at least for the next six months."

"We will pay no attention to the effects of the levy in the rental field until we have seen and studied the actual figures," said Cogswell last night.

The petition in question was filed by the Capitol View Realty Co. which is seeking a 9.6 per cent rent hike at the 62-unit Ambassador Apartments, 1750 16th st. nw.

Miller said last night that the expected higher operating costs resulting from the sales tax was a relatively minor point; that recent renovating of the building was the chief reason for seeking the rent boost.

The company also asked permission to eliminate the apartments telephone switchboard service and to install separate electric light meters in each unit.

Electric light bills to individuals are subject to the sales levy but telephone services are on the exempt list.

Attorney Herman Miller, representing the realty company, listed as justification for the rent increase the recent 7½ per cent real estate tax increase, "sales tax application" higher maintenance costs and substantial improvements to the property.

Pennies for Sales Tax In Plentiful Supply

It appears the District is amply prepared should a heavy demand for pennies develop next week due to the sales tax. In addition to local supplies, another 127 million pennies are available on a few hours' notice at the Philadelphia Mint.

George M. Fisher of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, said yesterday no special plans have been made for stocking up on the coppers, since regular supplies are expected to meet retailer needs.

At the mint, Assistant Director F. Leland Howard said he anticipated some increased demand when the new tax becomes effective.

"We've got plenty of pennies," he explained, In addition to retailers' stocks, banks carry a heavy supply, the cashier's office of the Treasury Department here has a huge batch, and in an emergency "we can get 127 million from the Philadelphia Mint by express overnight.

"If we run through the Philadelphia supply, we can always order from the other two mints," he pointed out. "It's not worrying us."

The mint's experience with imposition of the sales tax in various States has been an initial increase in demand for pennies, Howard said. This petered out, however, once the additional supply got into circulation.

He said that in many cases the sales tax helped reduce use of pennies by evening off odd sale prices. For example, a 98-cent special becomes an even dollar when 2 per cent sales tax is added.

The new cigarette tax will help reduce demand for pennies by changing the prices in many stores from 17 to 18, so two pennies in change instead of three will be returned on purchases.

House Rules Unit Refuses to Pass River, Harbor Bill

The House Rules Committee yesterday refused to send to the floor a bill authorizing $1,114,539,975 in new flood control and rivers and harbors projects.

While unusual, the action is not final since the chairman of the Public Works Committee can bring the bill up without a rule 21 days hence.

The bill normally is the biggest local interest legislation considered by Congress. Democratic Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.) had recommended quick approval so the bill could be brought up for debate next week.

Rules Chairman Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.), described the measure as "just pork barrel—all pork barrel." He said he couldn't say what the vote was because "there were so many against it."

Smokers to Pay Higher Price For Their Habit After Sunday

(Fifth of a Series)

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Smoking, regardless of whether you prefer cigarettes, cigars or the pipe, is bound to be a more expensive habit after Sunday.

On that date, the District will begin collecting a cent-a-pack tax on cigarettes. Stamps will be affixed to individual packages and the cost of these will probably be passed on to you.

Cigar and pipe smokers are exempt from the cigarette tax, but they will feel the additional tax burden in the form of sales tax on their tobacco purchases.

The price of cigarettes may show more than a penny-a-pack boost because wholesalers, retailers and vending machine operators will be required to obtain licenses that cost $10, $2, and $1 per machine, respectively.

Chain stores will be required to obtain a retail license for each unit. Cashiers and cigarette girls who sell smokes in restaurants and night clubs also will be required to obtain retail licenses unless the establishments in which they work do so.

The 1-cent tax will cover packages containing 20 or fewer, including those distributed as samples or prizes. Sale of loose cigarettes is prohibited.

A 3-cent tax will be placed on packages of 50 cigarettes and a 5-cent tax on 100s. Dealers will receive a 10 per cent discount on stamps for their trouble in affixing them. No sales tax will be placed on cigarettes.

Drug store operators, already bewildered about collecting taxes on the various forms of tobacco, will have other problems. Sales of medicines, pharmaceuticals and drugs are specifically exempted from the sales tax, but this is qualified by a provision saying this exemption does not cover cosmetics and toiletries now subject to Federal excise taxes.

Another exemption covers sales of crutches, wheelchairs, artificial limbs, eyes, hearing devices and false teeth.

Some common problems:

Q. If a purchase is made of a pack of cigarettes at 17 cents, two cigars for 25 cents and a can of pipe tobacco for 20 cents, how much sales tax is paid?

A. Cigarettes are exempted from the sales tax, therefore the tax will be a penny on the remaining items.

Q. Who defines what products are medicines, pharmaceuticals and drugs and therefore tax exempt?

A. They must be listed in the United States Pharmacopoeia, Homeopathic-Pharmacopoeia of the United States or the National Formulary or contain at least one ingredient listed therein.

Q. Are patent medicines exempted from sales tax?

A. Generally, yes, because almost all contain some items listed in the pharmacopoeia.

Q. Do I have to pay tax on medical supplies such as cotton, bandage or adhesive tape?

A. Yes. They are not considered medicines.

Q. Is a sales tax charged on ice cream or soda purchased for home consumption?

A. No, both are exempted whether eaten at the fountain or at home. Other items consumed at the fountain are taxable if they total more than $1.25.

Q. How about cosmetics, shaving lotion, toiletries or baby oil? Are they taxable?

A. Yes. They are on the Federal excise tax list.

Q. Are purchases of dentifrices, magazines, pocketbooks, stationery or small appliances taxed?

A. Yes.

Post Presents Fifth In Series on New Taxes

The Washington Post today presents the fifth of a series of eight articles describing the sales tax and other new taxes that go into effect August 1. The articles have been reviewed for accuracy by responsible District government officials.

The Washington Post has arranged with Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke for replies to sales tax questions submitted in writing by readers. Address Sales Tax Editor, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Replies will be printed in The Washington Post as rulings are received from the District Building. It will not be possible to acknowledge individual letters.

Gas Company Presents Rate Boost Today

Officials of the Washington Gas Light Co. will present their case for a 7 per cent rate increase to District consumers at a 10 a. m. public hearing today before the Public Utilities Commission. It will be held in the board room of the District Building.

PUC Chairman James Flanagan told reporters last night that hearings would be suspended for several days after the gas company had presented its appeal.

He promised further hearings for cross examination and to give citizens groups the chance to be heard. No residents have asked for hearing time thus far, Flanagan said last night.

The Federal Government, in the name of the Bureau of Federal Supplies, filed a petition yesterday to intervene in the hearing on grounds that the Government is the company's biggest gas consumer.

While not indicating whether the Government was opposed to the proposed rate increase, the petition stated that the agency wanted the "right to participate fully in all matters within the scope of the case."

Russia Will Discuss Return of 31 Ships

Russia finally has agreed to discuss arrangements for returning 31 vessels lend-leased to the Soviets during the war, the State Department announced yesterday.

Russian Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin has handed the department a note which announced that Soviet experts will leave at once for Washington to discuss return of the ships.

The vessels include three icebreakers and 28 navy frigates.

LUCKY STRIKE MEANS FINE TOBACCO!

Tests made by America's largest cigarette research laboratory scientifically help Lucky Strike buyers select the fine tobacco that goes into Luckies!

YOU SEE HERE the largest and most complete laboratory of its kind operated by any cigarette manufacturer in America.

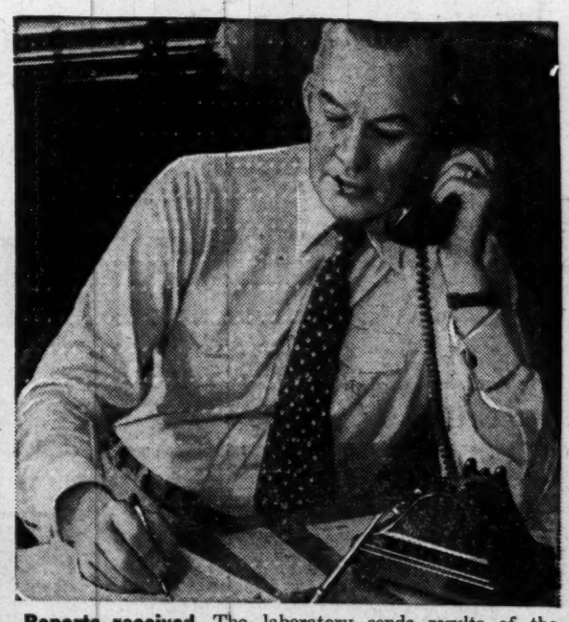
For many years Lucky Strike scientists have delved into cigarette research on an extensive scale. Out of this has grown an elaborate system of quality control. Every step in the making of Luckies—from before the tobacco is bought until the finished cigarette reaches you—comes under the laboratory's watchful eye. Literally hundreds of precision tests are conducted daily to make certain that the Lucky Strike you smoke is a finer, milder, more enjoyable cigarette.

As you read this, a constant stream of tobacco... samples from every tobacco-growing area... is flowing into the laboratory in Richmond, Virginia. These samples are scientifically analyzed, and reports of their quality go to the men who buy at auction for the makers of Lucky Strike.

Armed with this confidential, scientific information—and their own sound judgment—these men go after finer, lighter, milder tobacco. This fine tobacco—together with scientifically controlled manufacturing methods—is your assurance that there is no finer cigarette in the world today than Lucky Strike!

This man knows where fine tobacco grows. Here is one of Lucky Strike's tobacco-buying supervisors gathering sample leaves from a curing barn. Such samples are obtained from every tobacco-growing area and sent to the laboratory for premarket analysis. No wonder Lucky Strike means fine tobacco!

This scientist knows how to test tobacco. In our important Tobacco Control Division, the samples sent to the laboratory are subjected to scores of analyses to determine smoking quality. This vital testing, both before and after tobacco is purchased, has been conducted for years.



Reports received. The laboratory sends results of the analyses to the buying supervisors. This information helps the buyer go after finer, lighter, milder tobacco for Lucky Strike. Thus the judgment of the buyer at tobacco auctions is combined with the precision of modern science at the laboratory to assure you that Luckies are a finer, milder cigarette.

We know:

LUCKIES PAY MORE

Sawyer Expecting Business Pickup

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer said at the White House yesterday that he believed business would pick up in the months ahead if people don't get "scared."

Sawyer talked to newsmen after reporting to President Truman on his tour of New England. He went to that area to make a survey in connection with the Administration's program for dealing with unemployment pools.

Asked how the future looked to him, Sawyer said:

"Our general economy is strong. I think there will be a pickup in business if businessmen and others don't get scared."

He said that the "moderate decline" which Mr. Truman mentioned in his economic report to Congress was due in large measure to the fact that merchants had allowed their inventories to run low. He said that eventually they would have to start building up their stocks of goods; and this, he thought, would bring an upswing—provided that psychological factors don't interfere.

The Department of Commerce reported last night that personal income and retail sales remained steady during the second quarter of 1949 despite continued drops in industrial production and prices.

Seasonally adjusted retail sales varied only 1 per cent in the first six months of the year because of the high volume of automobile sales. Price reductions toward the end of the second quarter served to stimulate sales of other items.

The Department of Labor reported at the same time that 43,736,000 persons were employed in nonagricultural jobs last month. This was an increase of about 70,000 compared with May, but was nearly 1,300,000 below the figure for June, 1948.

The department said employment increased in nearly every major manufacturing industry during June. The biggest increase, it said, "took place in the construction industry, which added 65,000 employes."

Secretary Sawyer stated that, in his tour of New England, he found some "serious spots," especially in the textile industry. But buying orders in that industry, he said, were "slightly encouraging."

He said that New England manufacturers had urged a liberalization of the tax laws on depreciation of machinery, and also a reduction of the excise taxes.

Senate Plans Own Farm Bill

The Senate is going to have its own farm bill, the Committee on Agriculture decided yesterday.

Indications were that the bill will be entirely different from the continuation of Title One, or the Hope section, of the present law, which was voted by the House last week. This law provides for price supports of so-called basic farm products, at 90 per cent of parity.

The House indefinitely postponed the date when Title Two, or the Aiken section, of the farm law becomes effective. This section would set up a sliding scale for price supports. It was to become law next January.

The Senate Agricultural Committee directed a subcommittee headed by Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. M.) to draft a new program. It also decided to ignore most of the proposals offered to Congress by Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan.

The committee was agreed upon the following, members said:

1. Retention of high price supports for the "basic commodities," corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, rice and peanuts. Several members urged rigid supports at 90 per cent of parity. One group, headed by Sen. George D. Aiken (D., Va.) urged a compromise sliding scale of 75 to 90 per cent of parity. (The Aiken portion has a sliding scale of 60 to 90 per cent).

2. Establish flexible price supports for meats, dairy products, fruits and other "nonbasic" and perishable farm products. Supports would be raised or lowered in an attempt to control production.

Anderson said the committee still has to determine whether to modernize the present parity formula. The Aiken portion of the present law would bring it up to date.

Miners Reject Extension of Present Pact

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 27 (AP).—John L. Lewis preferred today to gamble for more wages for his soft coal miners rather than keep the contract they have for another two years.

The United Mine Workers rejected as "ridiculous" an offer by the northern and western bituminous operators to extend the old agreement to March 21, 1951.

This brought about another recess in negotiations until August 11. Similar contract talks with southern coal operators at Bluefield, W. Va., were recessed yesterday until August 10.

George H. Love, president of Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., told a news conference the two-year contract extension was offered "for the good of the industry and the miners."

"We pointed out that we have been through a boom period and we both have reaped some of the fruits of that period," Love said. "Now we are in a period of uncertainty, and we ask the miners to forego any wage advances."

Thomas Kennedy, vice president doing the UMW negotiating, told another conference that the offer is a "ridiculous proposition and does not meet the requirements of the situation in any particular and we reject it."

Lewis did not attend the negotiations, which resumed yesterday after nearly a four-week lapse.

But observers credited Lewis with depending on his trump card—the three-day work week—to pull out more benefits. They figure his strategy is to drag out negotiations while the short week keeps reducing the reserves of mined coal until next winter, when he can take the initiative.

Jap Pickpockets Increase

Tokyo, July 27 (U.P.).—Police reported that 190 Japanese pickpockets have been arrested in the last two weeks. They said the increasing number of amateur pickpockets had just about put the professionals out of business.

Steelworkers Will Sign T-H Affidavits; Appeal Hope Lost

New York, July 27 (AP).—The CIO steelworkers, the Nation's second largest union, agreed today to bring its million members into compliance with the Taft-Hartley Act by signing non-Communist affidavits.

The union announced it had reluctantly come to the conclusion that the act would not be repealed by this Congress and that it must avail itself of the law's election procedures and other provisions. This it could not do without signing the affidavits.

The international executive board of the steelworkers voted unanimously to direct union officers to comply with the act after hearing a speech by union president Philip Murray at a closed session.

Murray has been one of the bitterest foes of the affidavit requirement, although he has led in fighting Communist influence in the CIO, which he also heads, and in his own union.

The board's action came the day before a presidential fact-finding board opens hearings in the dispute between the union and the Nation's steel companies.

The union is demanding a wage boost, which has not been specified, pensions, and insurance benefits. The presidential board plans to take evidence for 16 days, then present a report to Mr. Truman by August 29.

The board's recommendations will not be binding on either side. However, the proceedings have averted a strike in the basic industry for 60 days, or until September 14.

It is possible that the union will attempt some move before the National Labor Relations Board against the companies in the wage-pension dispute after it has completed compliance under the Taft-Hartley law by filing the affidavits.

For instance, the steelworkers could charge the steel firms with failure to bargain under the law.

A resolution adopted by the union's executive board denounced the Taft-Hartley law as "this evil statute" and said:

"The United Steelworkers of America dedicates its entire membership to the unfinished task of repealing the Taft-Hartley Act and restoring the Wagner Act with improvements designed to safeguard labor's basic rights."

But, the resolution said, the officers were directed to sign the non-Communist affidavits "in order to safeguard the interests of the membership of the union and to go forward with the organization of the unorganized within our jurisdiction."

Truck Driver Strike Averted

77 of the International Union of Operating Engineers called two meetings for later this week to consider an offer of a 10-cent hourly increase submitted by the Master Builders Association. Officers of the local said they were dissatisfied with it.

The Operating Engineers have worked since May 1 without a contract. They have asked an hourly wage increase of 25 cents, plus a health and welfare fund jointly administered by the union and employers. The health and welfare fund was flatly refused in the 10-cent wage increase offer, officials said.

The offer will be considered first at a policy meeting of officers of the local today, and by the general membership meeting Saturday. Officers of the union would not predict whether a strike vote would be taken.

Get one of our conscientious motor tune-ups, and one of our thoroughgoing Lubricare treatments. We'll put the bounce back in your motor — while we're taking the bounce out of your ride.
We do this well because we're Buick men. We know your Buick, we've studied correct factory methods for each operation, we know the factory specifications your car was built to. We use genuine Buick parts — even special Buick tools!
Yet you don't pay a penny more for all these extras. Stop in this week, won't you?
HOW HIGH IS A TUNE-UP?
Our Buick tune-ups go far beyond adjusting your spark and carburetor. We cover a long list of things — your valve tappets, voltage regulator, fuel pump filter, coil, hose connections, and so on.
We even tighten the cylinder head and clean off your battery terminals — and do all this at a low, low, flat-rate price that will surprise you!
WHERE DOES LUBRICARE STOP?
In one of our exacting Lubricare treatments, you pay only what a routine "grease job" would cost elsewhere — but when your Buick comes purring back home you discover we've eased up the trunk latches, puffed a little pfft of graphite powder into your door locks, checked your brake fluid.
We've even oiled the windshield wiper mechanisms—and that's only a good beginning. While we lubricate we also inspect, from bumper to bumper—catching your little troubles before they grow to big ones.

Everybody's Talking

In this particular ivory tower the air conditioning system is the same kind that President Truman said the other day he preferred: the open window. The walls seem to be closer together than on what we laughingly refer to as "normal" days. Outside the pavement seems to jump up in our faces. Our clothing is wet and uncomfortable. But there is the consolation that the temperature will have dropped by the time you read this. This is a confident prediction, made because it is never as warm in the morning, when editorials are, or ought to be, read as it was when they are written the afternoon before. Also, the weatherman says that the drop will be more than the average difference between morning and afternoon.

But this is an elusive and distant consolation. Let's get right down to cases by proving that things were a lot worse in the good old days. Remember 1930? That was the year when Washington weather got its modern reputation. For 12 days in a row the temperature was 90 or above during July. Four of them showed 100 or more, and one, July 20, 1930, gave the highest reading ever recorded here, 105.6 degrees. And another thing: a couple of years ago the thermometer at a place called Snag, 300 miles south of Dawson in the Yukon, dropped to 81 degrees below zero.

ECA's $74,000,000

The recommittal on a technicality of the entire ECA appropriation bill undid the Senate's earlier action in restoring to the agency 74 million dollars cut from its funds by the Appropriations Committee. The sum in question makes up the difference between the one billion dollars that the ECA was authorized to borrow from the RFC to finance it during the last three months of the fiscal year 1949 and the sum that the House had approved and that Administrator Hoffman accordingly assumed would be available for that period. From the legalistic viewpoint the ECA obviously had no right to make firm commitments in excess of the billion dollars allowed until the ECA appropriations bill had been enacted. To be sure, Congress passed a joint resolution empowering agencies for which no provision had been made for the fiscal year 1950 to spend such amounts as might be necessary to carry on their activities under certain limiting conditions. However, Senators McKellar and Ferguson point out that this resolution applies to the current fiscal year. Hence any money spent by ECA under that authorization must be deducted from the sum finally appropriated for 1950. The question at issue, therefore, was whether the Senate would allow the ECA an additional 74 million dollars to take care of all its commitments for the past quarter or compel it to take that sum out of the total appropriation allowed it for the current year.

Probably the fact that Senate Administration leaders abandoned efforts to restore the 10 per cent cut in ECA appropriations approved by the Appropriations Committee was primarily responsible for the Senate's refusal to authorize the deduction of the 74-million-dollar item. However, Senator Vandenberg made an eloquent appeal for restoration of the 74-million-dollar cut, pointing out that ECA funds have to be committed from four to five months in advance of shipments. And for nearly four months that agency has had to operate without any regular appropriation to guide it. Hence Administrator Hoffman has had to exercise his best judgment "within the landmarks available to him in making his plans." Mr. Hoffman has, therefore, acted on the assumption that the Senate would follow the House lead by making $1,074,000,000 available for the last quarter of 1949. While we think that Senators McKellar and Ferguson are right in concluding that Congress has no legal obligation to cover ECA allotments in excess of a billion dollars for the last quarter of 1949, we do not share their belief that there is no moral obligation to do so.

The handicaps under which the ECA operates because of the delay in acting on its appropriations bill is felt in varying degrees by other Government agencies. Recommittal of the ECA measure gravely aggravates the logjam. Many Government operations have to be planned months in advance of their initiation, and their dependence on annual appropriations, often voted at the last minute, makes this work of preliminary preparation extremely difficult. Some agencies have to make alternative plans because of uncertainty as to the amount of funds that will be available, if any. This entails waste of time and money. In many cases, moreover, appropriations, especially those intended to finance projects extending over a period of years, could to advantage be made for correspondingly long periods of time. Certainly action on appropriations bills should be speeded up so that Government agencies will know well in advance of the end of the fiscal year what sums are available for use and for what purposes. The embarrassment caused the ECA by dilatory and erratic methods of handling appropriations bills merely emphasizes the need for a general reform of appropriations procedures.

Catching Spies

The latest of Senator McCarran's amendments to his amendments to the Espionage Act and the Foreign Agents Registration Act is extremely perplexing. It provides that "nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize, require or establish military or civilian censorship or in any way to limit or infringe upon freedom of the press or of speech as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States . . ." Well, of course, no act of Congress can authorize an infringement of the Constitution. Happily, we have the courts as well as Senator McCarran to protect us on this score. So the amendment appears to be mere verbiage. But one cannot help wondering why. Perhaps the Senator doth protest too much.

One of the principal changes recommended by Senator McCarran at the request of the Attorney General would extend the statute of limitations applicable to peacetime violation of the Espionage Act from three years to 10. Since violation of the act in time of war entails a death penalty, no statute of limitations is applicable in this connection. The purpose of a statute of limitations is to protect persons from prosecution for an alleged offense at a time when memory of the circumstances may have dimmed and when records, evidence and witnesses may be hard to obtain. If the immunity afforded by a statute of limitations sometimes enables guilty persons to escape punishment, it also safeguards innocent persons from an indefinite, overhanging threat of prosecution. However, three years is admittedly too short.

Another change proposed by Senator McCarran in the Foreign Agents Registration Act would require the registration of any person, with certain exceptions, who "has knowledge of or has received instruction or assignment in the espionage, counter-espionage, or sabotage service or tactics of a government of a foreign country or of a foreign political party." We cannot escape the feeling that there is a certain naivete in a law that tells a spy or saboteur to report to the Attorney General before embarking on the task he was sent here to accomplish. Moreover, as an agent of a foreign government, he would be required to register anyway under existing law. Perhaps, as Governor Dewey once suggested, the Department of Justice ought to try enforcing the laws already on the statute books.

Deficit Financing

In a letter published today on this page Mr. Nathan Robertson implies that The Washington Post was both dishonest and unintelligent in asserting that deficit financing produced the present postwar inflation and the corrective business recession. In disproof of this assertion Mr. Robertson states that it was during 1946 and 1947 when budgetary surpluses appeared for the first time in many years that postwar inflation developed to such a "dangerous extent that we are now suffering the consequences." (Mr. Robertson evidently is using estimates for calendar years based on cash income and outgo. The regular budget for the fiscal year 1946 showed a huge deficit.)

The facts cited do not in the least disprove our assertion. It was in those two years that the country began to experience the full inflationary effects of wartime deficit financing which, having created a huge volume of purchasing power, had been prevented from exercising its price inflating effect by means of rationing and price controls. When those controls vanished—prematurely, in the opinion of The Washington Post—the dikes against inflation were swept away and prices began to soar.

During the war and immediately thereafter, owing to deficit financing, the public was able to accumulate about 200 billion dollars of cash, bank deposits, and Government securities convertible into cash. These holdings constituted potential demands for goods—that is to say, the fuel for inflation. There were, to be sure, contributory causes of price increases due to shortages of certain kinds of goods and pent-up demands for products not obtainable during the war years. But it was the possession of excess purchasing power that enabled consumers to bid up prices and led eventually to the price distortions which are now in process of correction.

Red Fronts

The Vatican has interpreted its excommunication order to apply also to Catholic membership in "really Communist labor unions," in associations "organized directly by communism," in political parties which unite with the Communists, even to writers on any subject appearing in the Communist press.

The clarification still leaves many questions open as to the intent of the words "knowingly and willingly" as applied to those who "show favor" to the Communist party. This important problem involves Catholics on both sides of the Iron Curtain. It is certainly a question whether a person living within the Soviet orbit who collaborates with the Communist government under some form of duress, such as the forfeiture of his ration card, or threats against the safety of his family, can be said to have done so willingly. If the statements made by Cardinal Mindszenty on the eve of his arrest can be taken as a guide, it is probable that some latitude of conscience will be allowed to the laity in these matters, but that in the case of priests religious martyrdom will be considered a professional obligation. A further question, however, is raised concerning dissimulation. Underground organizations in which very large numbers of Catholics are doubtless involved are said to exist in most Communist countries, and would in the nature of things require a good deal of pretended conformity to the regime.

Similar questions had been raised in non-Communist countries where an open breach with Communism might involve a Catholic worker in the loss of his livelihood. The answer to this question now seems to be answered. The Vatican's counterattack upon the Communist persecutors contemplates an effort to break the hold of the Communists upon a large segment of the labor movement. In this case the worker is expected to sacrifice the immediate material welfare of his family to a larger spiritual purpose. The clarification of the excommunication order seems to be particularly aimed at the Left Wing Socialists in Italy, but it applies equally, it would appear, to membership in trade unions under Communist control, as, for instance, the General Confederation of Labor in France. Had such a decree been issued a few years ago, it would have created a very awkward predicament for more than one Catholic labor leader in the United States.

Baruch's Contribution

Mr. Baruch on his return home had some pertinent observations to make on the economic situation in Europe. But he trod on delicate ground when he attacked the socialistic record of the British government. We hope the example is not catching. A general election is brewing in England, and Premier Attlee might anticipate that election, and, as the saying goes, "go to the country." There would be a temptation so to do if the economic crisis gets worse—as, judging from the British application to OEEC in Paris for a higher allocation of Marshall Plan funds, it is getting worse—and some instance of American dictation could be blown up as an issue. There was such an issue, it is well to remember, in 1924, when a letter allegedly written by Zinoviev calling for active insurrectionism by British labor, contributed to Labor's defeat at the polls.

Actually socialization, or, as they call it, nationalization, of industry does not account for Britain's difficulties. Only about 20 per cent of Britain's industry is nationalized, and it may be doubted whether even a Conservative government would undo what has been done in this respect in industry. What Mr. Baruch had to say about decontrols of trade and currency so as to expedite the integration of the European economy is more to the point. This has real relevance to undertakings that were shouldered when the Marshall Plan was initiated, and the reminder, therefore, cannot savor of interference.

Another Dud

For the fifth time in as many Congresses, a bill to forbid the levying of a poll tax as a prerequisite of voting in elections for Federal offices has passed the House. There was no elation evident this time, because of the certainty among House members that the measure is doomed to share the fate of its predecessors: death in the Senate.

What the House has accomplished, then, is simply to mark up another X on the wall. In those seven States where poll taxes are still levied, they will continue in effect. By repassing the bill once more the House gains no tangible achievement—or any moral one, either. As we have said in the past, the anti-poll tax bill is the wrong way to attack the problem. It is the slowest way just because it is the most direct.

A real constitutional question is involved in the question whether the Congress by statute can define the qualifications of voters in any respect. The Constitution gives this privilege to the States themselves. The issue thus ought to be settled squarely and cleanly in the way provided for amending the Constitution. If the Eighty-first Congress wants to make some contribution to democracy, it should start an anti-poll tax amendment through the works and forget about trying to pass an anti-poll tax bill.

PRISONERS

What shall I do with the words I have written,
What shall I do with the words "beauty" and "peace?"
What shall I do with the golden fruit death-bitten,
What shall I put on my tongue in place of these?

Oh where shall I hide them now from the fierce fire,
Where can I go now to speak them half-ashamed?
I hear the answer: "Heap them upon the pyre—
Be merciful to the wounded and the maimed."

But I'll not heed! I shall go to a dark wood
And make for them there a sheltered prison;
And they will be safe from the flames and the flood
Till the new day has dawned, the new sun risen.

Deficit Financing

It is difficult to understand how an honest and intelligent newspaper such as The Washington Post can contend, as it did in its July 15 editorial, "Simplified Rendition," that "it was deficit financing that produced the postwar inflation and its aftermath of a limited, though so far moderate, business recession."

The facts are these. There have been only two years in the past 20 when the Government had a balanced budget or a surplus. They were in 1946 and 1947. Only in these years has the Government, during the past two decades, taken in more money than it paid out, and cut down the public debt. Yet it was during these years that the postwar inflation flourished and developed to such a dangerous level that we are now suffering the consequences.

Until The Washington Post can develop a better argument for condemning deficit financing I will go along with the President.

"Loyalty Straitjacket"

Your July 21 editorial, "Loyalty Straitjacket," puts you in the position of advocating the theory that to require loyalty of a citizen thereby puts him in a straitjacket—or that to require loyalty of a group of fellows being educated at the expense of the taxpayer thereby puts such a program in a straitjacket. The mere statement of such a position should refute it!

Your statement that screening out of disloyal persons by the Attorney General, upon investigation and report by the FBI, would allow the Attorney General absolute and unchecked control over the award of atomic energy fellowships, is likewise unfounded. By what better agency could such authority be exercised? Or do you prefer that disloyal persons be educated at public expense rather than risk that the Attorney General and the FBI would be unfair, arbitrary, and act contrary to their authority in order to disqualify a person whose loyalty is questionable?

Merchant Marine Funds

To set Mr. Joe M. Baker, jr., (letter appeared July 22) straight on merchant marine academy funds, may we point out that the position of the Senate Appropriations Committee is supported by the President of the United States, the Bureau of the Budget, and the House Appropriations Committee, as well as the CIO Maritime Committee and the Masters, Mates and Pilots, AFL. On March 31, 1949, President Truman sent a special communication to the Congress (House Document 151) paring his original budget estimates for maritime training from 6½ million to a little over 3 million dollars. This document contains a letter from the Director of the Budget in which he states that "recommended downward revision in the 1950 budget is warranted by the increasing unemployment among qualified American seamen already in the industry."

There are 120,000 licensed merchant marine officers in the United States according to the records of the United States Coast Guard. There are only 14,900 jobs for licensed officers in the maritime industry at the present time. There are 850,000 men who hold United States Coast Guard certificates as unlicensed seamen. There are jobs for only 64,000 of these men. Over 30,000 skilled seamen and licensed officers are now actively seeking employment in the maritime industry, and there are no jobs for them.

A sample study of the last 100 qualified seamen graduated by the United States Maritime Service in 1947 shows that 84 never shipped aboard vessels in the American Merchant Marine subsequent to their graduation. Of the 16 who did ship, only 9 remain in the industry today. Obviously an extravagant sum of money is being spent for each seaman placed aboard ship.

If the Congress really believes in economy, here is a real and constructive way to demonstrate its position. We are not opposed to the maritime training programs as such. We do, however, oppose the misguided training of new men for an industry that already has serious unemployment and the padding of an appropriation to maintain a bureaucracy that grew up out of wartime needs.

Transit Radio

The complaints about radios in public conveyances are more than justified. Isn't the Capital Transit Co. guilty of harboring a public nuisance? Further, why isn't an injunction gotten out restraining them from inflicting this cacophony upon helpless victims? I, too, shall boycott the products advertised.

Suppose this is annoying to their men. It will mean nerves, and nerves mean accidents.

"Foreign" Economy

An Associated Press story in your issue of July 18 states that Senator Byrd (D., Va.) is demanding that President Truman's economic advisers be investigated. He seems to be irked because "this strange group of men" dare to think independently of the propaganda put out by the Dixiecrats and the Republicans.

To Senator Byrd's query "Is this country not being asked to follow some foreign ideology that has already failed abroad?" I would emphatically reply in the affirmative. But it is being asked to do so by Senator Byrd and his buddies, i.e., to follow the type of economy which England found so successful for nearly a hundred years but which has failed in every European country as of 1949 and which would be absolutely on the rocks here in America, too, were it not for the Government pump-priming of the thirties, the war spending of the early forties, and the "defense" spending of the post-World War II era of today.

If Senator Byrd wanted to do something really constructive for America, he would "demand" that a fact-finding body be set up by Congress to find out why our so-called "American way" can only put scientists and economists on the job rather than financiers and politicians. What we need is a really American way and not this European economy which is being palmed off on us as originating in America—an economy that just won't work when one player has all the marbles.

Catholic Stand On Education

The best defense of the Barden bill (which needs no defense) can be found in the Catholic magazine America which is edited by the Rev. R. C. Hartnett, who in a letter of July 18 explains the Catholic position with regard to Federal aid to education.

On May 17, 1941, it printed the following by John J. O'Connor:

"How we have loathed and despised this lucifer civilization, this rationalist creation of those little men who refuse to bend the knee or bow the head in submission to higher authority . . . Today, American Catholics are being asked to shed their blood for that particular kind of secularist civilization which they have been heroically repudiating for four centuries. This civilization is now called democracy, and the suggestion is being made that we send the Yanks to Europe again to defend it.

"In reality is it worth defending? What's the sum and substance of it all? All the Yanks in America will not save it from disintegration. Unless a miracle occurs, it is doomed—finally and irrevocably doomed. The New Order in Europe will be either a Nazi or a British totalitarianism, or a combination of both . . .

"American democracy is disintegrating, crumbling from within. Fatigue, disillusionment, disgust, the unbearable tension in society, the fear of war and the fear of bankruptcy, the absence of security, the technological revolution which has gone far beyond the instruments of social control, deep-rooted, anarchistic hatred of a social order, which has too long denied the principle of social justice, the revolt of the masses and the leveling of all values, the absence of all common ethical basis—these are but a few of the multiple factors in the decline which now is upon us . . .

"Leadership in this crisis will not come from the laity. It will not come from the bottom of the Catholic pyramid. It will come only from the top, from the hierarchy. The Christian revolution will begin when we decide to cut loose from the existing social order, rather than be buried with it."

The "Catholic position" is also made very clear regarding our public schools. In the Pope's encyclical on education of December 31, 1929, the claim to complete control over American education is stated as follows:

"In the first place, education belongs preeminently to the Catholic Church for two supernatural reasons . . . As to the scope of the educative mission, it extends over all peoples without any limitations . . . Nor is there a civil power which can oppose or prevent it."

Regarding released time the encylical continues as follows:

"Neither can Catholics admit that type of mixed school . . . in which the students are provided with separate religous instruction but receive other lessons in common with non-Catholic pupils from non-Catholic teachers. For the mere fact that a school gives some religous instruction does not bring it in accord with the rights of the Church and of the Christian family. To be this, it is necessary that all the teaching and the whole organization of the school, and its teachers, syllabus, and textbooks in every branch, be regulated by the Christian spirit, under the direction and maternal supervision of the Catholic Church . . . and this in every grade of school, not only in the elementary but the intermediate and higher institutions of learning as well."

Top Tenth In New Role

By Malvina Lindsay

Patriotic Spending

ONCE MORE the top financial tenth of the Nation, those with incomes of $5000 a year or more, may face a call to patriotic spending. This time it would be to get into the market rather than stay out. For this group has a margin of spending power that could help halt recession and unemployment, even help stabilize world economy through its use of imports.

A year and a half ago this group was being urged to "make do" with what it had and thus help bridle the boom. For the great mass of low income families—then as now—had no choice but to buy as best it could its pressing necessities.

Now scare talk about business has sent some comfortable and well to do consumers and investors into hiding either to hoard their dollars indefinitely or await prewar prices. And showing up are some counterparts of the squirrel-like hoarders of wartime goods, who unpatriotically abetted scarcity, and, in reverse form, of the careless splurgers of boom days who unpatriotically boosted inflation.

But today's hoarders will wait futilely for the return of prewar prices, as Dr. Edwin G. Nourse of the President's Council of Economic Advisers has warned. Dr. Nourse's further advice to consumers and to business to "shop around but have willingness to spend as values are offered" applies particularly to those in the higher income group.

ONE REASON for sales declines in many fields has been that consumers thought prices too high. Often they were right. Moreover, during the war, consumers, especially women, became expert shoppers. Also many of those with goods to sell got careless and arrogant. However, when better values and prices are offered, consumers need to come halfway. If they don't, stores and factories will curtail stocks, cut operations, fire and lay off more help. This eventually will come home to consumers' families.

People are generally ready to buy when they are offered what they think is their money's worth. Yet there is a developing trend to "put off till things get cheaper" or prices "break wide open"—in short, to wait for the good old days of the 1930's when "you could buy a lot for a dollar if you happened to have the dollar." This attitude offers a psychological threat to the hoped-for upturn in business.

With national income running so high there is plenty of purchasing power. Manufacturers may be finding the going harder because so much is being spent in summer travel. Some maintain most families have bought the appliances, furniture and other "capital goods" they needed for their homes. However, it is doubtful if there is any home that "has everything."

People face now—as they did when the boom was rising—the question of economic citizenship. Yet they wouldn't keep their money out of circulation then for the Nation's good or even their own eventual self-interest. Why then should we hope they will be induced to put it into circulation when and if it is acutely needed?

HOWEVER, national necessity, the economic state of the world, and a realistic sense of their own long-term interest may awaken some to more judicious and constructive use of their dollars. The huge production of this country must have a market. There is also a great need to buy imports to keep the world from going broke. This creates a situation that deeply concerns the individual consumer, as well as the shadowy "they" who run the Government. It demands that standards of living be raised both here and throughout the world and that in the present emergency dollars be kept working instead of lying idle.

The British are just now facing more austerity—a call to harder work, longer hours, less goods, all as a sacrifice to save their nation from bankruptcy. Yet Americans need to consume more, spend more, invest more, as their "sacrifice" to keep their nation from going further into a business decline that could make even more shaky the peace of the world.

Students of political affairs estimate that only about one tenth of the electorate takes any active, dynamic part in local or national government. And one tenth of the population gets about one third of the huge national income. This ten per cent should take its economic leadership seriously enough to throw its weight as consumers to the end of the boat that seems most in danger of sinking.

"You Can't Win"

I have been much interested in Dr. Blanche's book which you have condensed, You Can't Win. While it is seemingly true, one statement he makes is hardly creditable, coming as it does from a professional statistician of some repute.

That is that poker is not a game of skill. Any freshman knows that while no individual poker hand can prove any skill, any thousand hands can. To insist that the game is pure luck is to assert that some men are born under a lucky star while others are born unlucky. As any former GI can testify certain men who engaged in the great American pastime made money steadily. ROBERT C. LUNCH.

Steel Wages—Errors In The Nathan Report

By Elisha M. Friedman
Consulting Economist

IN RELEASING the Robert Nathan reports on the fourth round of wage increases, the CIO officials call him a private consultant and present his report as a scientific analysis of an impartial expert. However, Mr. Nathan speaks as a special pleader or a retained counsel. He rationalizes the fantastic demands of the union by irrational economies.

In his first report, Mr. Nathan states that most businesses could grant substantial wage increases without increasing selling prices. In his second report, he states specifically that the steel industry could increase wages substantially and still earn record profits at much less than capacity production. He urges that wage rates should rise when profits increase, but he does not urge that wage rates should decline where profits have sharply decreased.

Wage rates in the steel and automobile industry have increased substantially more than cost of living if one takes the year 1939 as a base. A rise in union wage rates requires a rise in selling prices, paid by the rest of the community. The danger is that wage rates always become permanent rigid changes a fixed and inflexible cost based on transitory profits for some particular quarter-year. But these profits are not permanent. The stock market since 1946 has refused to rise, on the clear assumption that these high earnings will not last.

MR. NATHAN makes a point that it is better to raise wages than to lower selling prices. Better for whom? Ask the broad masses of the consuming public. Lowering selling prices in recessions is the law of a free, competitive market and applies democratically to all consumers. Raising wages for a minority is the result of monopoly power exercised by union oligarchy. Only recently has one courageous Congressman asked that the Sherman Antitrust Act be invoked against such monopoly power.

A fourth round of wage increases would aggravate the already great differential between earnings of brain and brawn. In Detroit, porters are earning more than school teachers. In Los Angeles the laundress in a hospital receives more than the resident physician. In New York truckmen delivering newspapers earn more than the reporters who write the news and thus create the truckmen's jobs. Unorganized professional classes—physicians, lawyers, civil engineers—earn average wages, in many cases, substantially less than laboring men whose preparation for work is brief and insignificant by comparison. How long can this trend continue?

The basic statistical error is that Mr. Nathan's reports are based not on the decade 1930 to 1939, but on the high activity of the war period, 1939-45, and the high activity of the postwar period, when deferred demands were creating supernormal business.

The hitherto accepted theory was that when people could no longer buy at the prevailing price, they might buy at a lower price. Therefore, merchants with heavy inventories slashed prices to move them. Any merchant who would raise prices in face of a declining demand would be regarded as quite irrational and would go broke. That is precisely what Mr. Nathan recommends. He would raise wages when there is a surplus of labor and when selling prices are falling.

MR. NATHAN is repeating the arguments presented in 1945 and 1946 by Government economists. On August 15, 1945, the Report of the Director of Reconversion, written by Mr. Nathan, forecast unemployment of five million or more within three months and eight million or more by the following spring. The argument then was that a rise in wages would avert unemployment. But instead of the recession forecast by the Government economists, we had a boom. The Government forecasters were thus bailed out because they were wrong. However, in 1949, the recession is already upon us and the argument for an increased wage has already been rejected in those industries that declined early. The trick that worked in 1945 may not work in 1949.

Mr. Nathan repeats the trite argument that the buying power of the worker today is no greater than at its peak in June, 1946, just before the end of price control. To determine buying power he selected a period when wages were free and high and prices were controlled and low. However, a fairer comparison would be a base period used by the Government, 1936-1939, or some other equivalent prewar period.

As for steel profits, they rose recently chiefly because the price of scrap and other raw materials declined. If the price of scrap remains low, competition will cut the price of finished steel. However, Robert Nathan urges that because scrap and other sensitive raw materials are declining due to a recession, therefore less sensitive wages should rise. This is a nonsequitur.

The estimated profits of Mr. Nathan are unreal. They do not allow for adequate depreciation. Construction costs are now about three times the prewar level but the Treasury Department will not allow the companies correspondingly to increase depreciation charges. Yet new machinery for replacement requires more dollars than the old machines wearing out. Futhermore, profits are needed for expansion and for reserves.

Mr. Nathan states that the return on net worth is high. However, net worth is expressed in ancient dollars, some going back to 1913, whereas profits are expressed in 1949 dollars. To compare the 1913 or the 1939 dollar of net worth with the 1949 dollar of profit is like comparing full strength whisky with diluted whisky in the highball.

AS A positive recommendation, let the CIO consider several simple alternatives. If the profits for one quarter are held out as a basis for wage increases, let the wage increase take effect for one quarter only, subject to revision when the next quarter's profits appear.

With good will on both sides, it should be possible to devise a sliding scale of wages which would move down as well as up, depending upon the volume of profits, the cost of living or the percentage of capacity, instead of Mr. Nathan's rigid high wage rate per hour, in the face of declining employment. It would be better to seek full employment by means of variable costs based on variable wages. The constant objective should be full employment not high wage rates. What good is a high wage rate if there are no wages?

Mr. Nathan concludes his report with recommendations on public policy. After penalizing private investors, he would reduce taxes to stimulate domestic investment and at the same time would increase subsidies to the farmers, embark on large public works and increase social insurance in many fields. His ends and means again are obviously inconsistent. His front wheels and hind wheels are moving in opposite directions.

New York.

Washington Calling

Weaknesses In The Arms Program

WHILE THE National Security Council rarely makes the headlines, it begins to look as though, to an ever-increasing degree, the council shapes the major decisions taken by the Government in the foreign field. Dominating the council is Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, and his influence is believed to have determined the outline of the arms program President Truman has requested from Congress.

Childs

The report persists that Johnson won out for his view that arms aid should go not only to western Europe, Greece and Turkey but to the Philippines, Korea and Iran. In this he is said to have overborne Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who believed in concentration rather than in a charge of buckshot scattered widely around the globe.

In a showdown with the members of the council representing the military department, Acheson would inevitably be voted down. Beside the President, the Secretaries of State and Defense, the council is made up of the Secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force, plus the chairman of the National Security Resources Board, a position that has been vacant for more than six months.

With Johnson dominating the national defense establishment as he does, the three other military secretaries would hardly vote against him. Thus he directs an agency with the most far-reaching powers, which in turn controls and directs the Central Intelligence Agency.

THE WAY in which decisions on military aid can determine foreign policy hardly needs explanation. Iran, designated to receive part of the supplementary fund of $300,580,000, is a good example.

Repeated and desperate pleas for help have come from Iran, with the Soviet Union on its northern border. The blight of Middle East poverty keeps all but a tiny fraction of Iranians in squalor and disease. A precarious internal stability is maintained from day to day with the aid of the gendarmerie and the military.

The 29-year-old Shah, Mohammed Riza Pahlevi, has genuinely progressive impulses. He would like to make a start by reforming the water supply in the principal towns. It is incredibly polluted and the poverty-stricken Iranians are made to pay dearly for its use.

Now, if aid goes only for military purposes, the most repressive and reactionary elements in the country will be strengthened. The Shah, already in part a prisoner of powerful military men, will become increasingly dependent on those who resist any and all reform.

Moreover, a little aid will not go far. No small part of it will be lost in the sands of corruption and graft. But a little aid will open the way for a request for more and more and more. And the persuasive argument will be made that we must save what we have already put in by throwing in still more assistance.

Whether this driblet of military aid will actually strengthen Iran is doubtful. A coordinated, large-scale approach on both the economic and the military front is called for.

These and other weaknesses in the arms program are sufficiently glaring. They will be picked over in great detail when the proposal is debated in the Senate.

But glaring as the weaknesses are, they do not seem to me to justify simply evading the responsibility implied in the North Atlantic Pact. That is what the Vandenberg proposal to limit the whole program to mere interim aid of perhaps 300 million dollars really is—evasion.

EVEN AT this late date in this unhappy session of an unhappy Congress it should be possible to come up with a revised program. Concentration on western Europe, with continuation in limited form of the commitments already made to Greece and Turkey, might be the answer. This was Secretary Acheson's point of view.

The Republicans belabor the Administration for its obvious failures and blunders. Their weakness is that they never come up with a positive, constructive program as an alternative.

All the double talk during the debate on the pact could not conceal the obligation in that solemn agreement to help the peoples that risked their future in signing up. Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon put it this way:

"You can sign the Atlantic Pact and you can nail it up on Joe Stalin's wall. But it won't mean anything unless you give tangible aid to the European nations that joined in the belief they would get assistance."

That is a harsh bit of truth which will bear repeating as the double-talk record is played over again.

Last Fiscal Year

World Bank Net Income: 10.6 Million

The World Bank had net income of $10,610,247 for the fiscal year ended June 30, a financial statement issued by it showed tonight.

Against expenses totaling $10,963,166, the 48-nation institution had a total income of $21,578,413, not counting another $4,989,210 which was set aside in the Bank's special reserve against possible losses.

The net income figure for fiscal 1949 brought the total excess of income over expenses since the bank began operations to $13,641,094.

The addition to special reserves brought the total of the latter to $8,074,141 on June 30.

Loan Commitments Up

Loan commitments by the Bank increased from 497 million dollars to $650,100,000 during the fiscal year. Twelve loans were granted.

The Bank reported that entry of Austria and Thailand to membership during the fiscal year increased its subscribed capital by $62,500,000 to a total of $8,348,500,000.

During the fiscal year the governments of Canada and the United Kingdom granted permission to the Bank to loan the equivalent of eight million dollars and $2,015,000, respectively, out of the portions of their subscriptions to the Bank's capital paid in their own currencies. As previously announced, the United States had granted the Bank the right to use the full amount of its 18 per cent subscription, and Belgium had approved the use of the equivalent of two million dollars of its currency.

Publishes Yearbook

Meanwhile, the International Monetary Fund provided a picture of the postwar flow of international transactions over a large part of the world with publication of its first "Balance of Payments Yearbook."

The 383-page volume carries figures ranging in scope and significance from a $210,000 debit entry for Ecuador's film rentals in 1947 to the $5.6 billion cited for Europe's 1948 payments deficit with the United States.

It gives comparative statistics on current and capital account covering 51 countries for the years 1938, 1946 and 1947, with preliminary figures in some cases for 1948. Among the major items shown in the current account are movements of merchandise, income from investments, transportation earnings, travel, and government transactions.

ASNE Scores Newsmen's State Job-Holding

The board of directors of the American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE) yesterday condemned the acceptance of State government jobs by some Illinois newspapermen between 1941 and 1949.

In a unanimous report on the Illinois case, the 15 members of the board said there is substantial evidence of a long-standing custom in Republican and Democratic administrations in Illinois of rewarding certain citizens by giving them jobs involving little or no service to the public.

The text of the conclusions set forth by the board of directors follows:

"There is substantial evidence of a long-standing political custom in Republican and Democratic administrations in the State of Illinois of rewarding some newspaper publishers and their employes, along with other citizens working for the party, by jobs on the State payroll, involving little or no service to the public.

'We Deplore Practice'

"We deplore this practice by any government as an improper use of public funds.

"We condemn the acceptance of such funds by newspapermen as unethical and as contrary to the public responsibilities and obligations of the press.

"In the process of our investigation, certain facts became evident which we believe place in clear perspective the malpractice of a few newspapermen against the background of political custom in the State.

"Some 40,000 names on the State payroll during the eight-year administration of former Gov. Dwight Green were checked against the names of about 800 newspapermen. Exactly 51 newspapermen were found on the payrolls.

Some Jobs Sinecures

"A majority of these 51, in the opinion of the ASNE investigating committee, held State jobs that were either outright sinecures or jobs in which their duties were entirely or primarily political. But there were among them men who held legitimate positions, widely known to the public, performing services to the State against which there is no valid criticism.

"Of the 832 newspapers in Illinois, fewer than 50 were in any way involved in a situation which was widely interpreted outside the State as reflecting on the State press in particular and, indirectly, on the press of the country in general.

"For reasons that are partly historical, conditions in Illinois reflect the attitude of a small minority of the newspapermen, primarily individuals whose first allegiance is to party politics, and whose newspaper work is incidental to their partisan activity, most of the newspapers involved were of that class, so small and so weak economically as to depend on public printing or other forms of political subsidy or patronage for existence.

Posts Inherited

Emoluments, in the form of fake State jobs, were in some cases found to have been inherited by newspapers and newspapermen from previous ownership or previous holders of the newspaper jobs, and the precise origin of such emoluments was unknown to some of the recent recipients.

"There are many legitimate opportunities for newspapermen to serve at the Federal, State or local governmental level, but such service should never be clandestine, and there should always be, at the beginning of such service, full disclosure of the nature of the work and compensation given therefor.

"We commend the initiative and journalistic enterprise of the Chicago Daily News and St. Louis Post-Dispatch in exposing these improper practices in the State of Illinois among members of our own profession.

"The failure of the press associations to move the story promptly was due not to any considered intent to surpress the news of the exposures but to faulty news judgment.

Good Faith Imperiled

"Newspapers and wire services should be as quick to report public criticism of the press as to report criticism of any other element of our society. Failure to do so invites damaging inference as to the good faith of the press.

"We believe the effect of the publication of the Chicago Daily News and St. Louis Post-Dispatch stories has been wholesome. While attention has been centered primarily on Illinois, the disclosures should lead newspapers and newspapermen throughout the country to examine their own practices as well as political practices existing in their localities. The press of the country should be alert to the importance of avoiding not only evil, but all appearance of evil.

"Our newspapers must be the auditors of government. Anything that compromises their independence, their freedom to evaluate and to criticize, their reputation for complete integrity and fairness, threatens not only the press but the system of free government under which we live.

Imposes Obligation

"This concept of the role of the press imposes an obligation that no newspaperman can neglect if he is true to his calling.

"We draw attention finally to the code of ethics of canons of journalism accepted by the American Society of Newspaper Editors from its foundation, which emphasize that independence—freedom from all obligations except that of fidelity to the public interest is vital."

The board gave the following chronology:

The first copyrighted stories in the Chicago Daily News and St. Louis Post-Dispatch appeared April 14. The Associated Press first carried the story on its national wires April 27. United Press and International News Service first carried the story on May 10.

[The Washington Post published a special article on the situation in its editions of April 25.—Editor's note.]

The Chicago Daily News Service, which distributes articles to various newspapers, did not itself transmit the stories to its clients until May 2. After receiving a request from one of the clients, Basil L. Walters, executive editor of the Knight Newspapers (owners of the Chicago Daily News), told the ASNE board: "We considered it an Illinois story. We did not forsee the national impact. We have frankly been amazed by the terrific national interest manifested . . ."

Investigating Group

The investigating committee was composed of Jenkin Lloyd Jones, editor of the Tulsa Tribune; A. Y. Aronson, managing editor of the Louisville Times, and John W. Hillman, editorial director of the Indianapolis News.

Individually they traveled over Illinois, and interviewed 30 of the 51 newspapermen who had been on the State payroll.

Jenkin Lloyd Jones also is a member of the ASNE board of directors.

The board's report was written by the following board members acting as a drafting committee: B. M. McKelway, editor, Washington Star, and president of the ASNE; Virginius Dabney, editor, Richmond Times-Dispatch; N. R. Howard, editor, Cleveland News; Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher, Washington Post; David Lawrence, editor, U. S. News & World Report; and Hamilton Owens, editor-in-chief, Baltimore Sun.

German Editors Hear Allen Hit Censorship as Totalitarian

German editors, some of whom had suffered great personal hardships in the Hitler days, heard again from a high American official that censorship is the "handmaiden" of totalitarianism.

George Allen, assistant Secretary of State, told a group of German and Austrian editors here to see American life firsthand, that Government's part in the information field must always remain subsidiary to that of private industry.

The 20-odd editors were back from a couple of weeks spent working on papers across the Nation. They were the guests of the four Washington newspapers at dinner at the Statler Hotel.

Allen, director of the State Department's overseas information activities, noted that such projects as the Voice of America constituted a "new method of conducting foreign relations"—"peoples speaking directly to peoples."

Col. B. B. McMahon, who had a large part in the Army's newspaper-licensing program in Germany, asserted that the editors are giving the German people "a much better news picture than any preceding press in Germany has ever done."

Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post and toastmaster for the dinner, paid tribute to the German and Austrian press of the pre-Hitler era, as well as to various newspaper mechanical advances that have come from Germany—rotogravure, for example.

He asked the German editors to remember that the American press is far from perfect—"but imperfect as it may be, with all its weaknesses, it is still the best press in the world."

Speaking for the Germans, Walter Tschuppik, editor of the Abendzeitung of Munich, said after their stay in this country they could take back to Europe the picture that "American democracy is healthy, good and well founded—in no danger either from the left or the right."

Dr. Karl Siepen, general manager of the Austrian Press Agency, spoke briefly for the Austrian edotors.

Mrs. Roosevelt Makes Reply

eral funds to aid church or private schools.

"Spiritual leadership," Mrs. Roosevelt told the churchman, "should remain spiritual leadership and the temporal power should not become too important in any church."

Mrs. Roosevelt declared that "domination of education or of government by any one religious faith is never a happy arrangement for the people."

And she said control "by the Roman Catholic Church of great areas of land" in Europe has not always "led to happiness for the people of those countries."

The controversy surrounds a bill introduced in Congress by Representative Barden (D., N. C.) This bil would provide up to 300 billion dollars a year in Federal funds to the various States for school operating expenses.

It would ban the use of Federal funds by private or parochial schools. It also would rule out Federal money for school bus, public health and similar programs. Private and church schools get public funds for these purposes in some States.

The Barden bill is a substitute for a Senate-approved measure that would allow States to pass on funds to nonpublic schools if they wished.

In Washington, a new aid-to-education bill without the curb on funds for parochial schools was introduced by three Republicans, Representatives Morton (Ky.), Kearns (Pa.) and Werdel (Calif.).

Their bill contains curbs against any Federal control of education and would leave unchanged the present relations between States and private or church schools.

The Morton-Kearns-Werdel bill offered one possible way of breaking the House deadlock over the Barden bill, which has been blocked in committee, but most congressional leaders regarded chances as dim for passing any Federal aid bill at this session.

The text of Mrs. Roosevelt's letter to Cardinal Spellman follows:

"Your Eminence:

"Your letter of July 21 surprised me considerably.

"I have never advocated the Barden bill nor any other specific bill on education now before the Congress. I believe, however, in Federal aid to education. I have stated in my column some broad principles which I consider important and said I regretted your attack on the Barden bill because you aligned yourself with those, who from my point of view, advocated an unwise attitude which may lead to difficulties in this country, and have, as a result, the exact things which you and I would deplore, namely, the increase in bitterness among the Roman Catholic groups, and the Protestant and other religious groups.

"I read only what was in the papers about your address and I stated in my column very carefully that I had not read the Barden bill or any other bill carefully, because I do not wish to have it said that I am in favor of any particular bill.

"If I may, I would like to state again very simply for you the things I believe are important in this controversy. In the early days in this country there were rather few Roman Catholic settlements. The majority of the people coming here were Protestants and not very tolerant, but they believed that in establishing a Democratic form of government it was essential that there be free education for as large a number of people as possible, so there was a movement to create free public schools for all children who wished to attend them. As we have developed in this country we have done more and more for our public schools. They are open to all children and it has been decided that there should be no particular beliefs taught in them.

"I believe that there should be freedom for every child to be educated in his own religion. In public schools it should be taught that the spiritual side of life is most important. I would be happy if some agreement could be reached on passages from the Bible and some prayer that could be used. The real religious teaching of any child must be done by his own church and in his own home.

"It is fallacious, I think, to say that because children going to public schools are granted free textbooks in some States, free transportation, or free school lunches, that these same things must be given to children going to private schools. Different States, of course, have done different things as they came under majority pressure from citizens who had certain desires, but basically by and large, throughout the country. I think there is still a feeling that the public school is the school which is open to all children, and which is supported by all the people of the country and that anything that is done for the public schools should be done for them alone. I would feel that certain medical care should be available to all children, but that is a different thing and should be treated differently. If we set up free medical care for all children, then it should not be tied in with any school. At present there are physical examinations for children in public school which are provided without cost to the parents, but there is nothing to prevent people who send their children to private schools from making arrangements to pay for similar examinations for their children.

"I should like to point out to you that I talked about parochial schools and that to my mind means any schools organized by any sectarian group and not exclusively a Roman Catholic school. Children attending parochial schools are, of course, taught according to the tenets of their respective churches.

"As I grow older it seems to me important that there be no great stress laid on our divisions, but that we stress as much as possible our agreements.

"You state: 'And the Supreme Court of the United States has declared that health and transportation services and the distribution of nonreligious textbooks to pupils attending parochial schools do not violate our Constitution.' None of us will presume to decide questions which will come up before the Supreme Court of the United States, but all of us must think seriously about anything which is done, not only in relation to the specific thing, but in relation to what may follow after it and what we think will be good for the country.

"Anyone who knows history, particularly the history of Europe, will, I think, recognize that the domination of education or of government by any one particular religious faith, is never a happy arrangement for the people.

"Spiritual leadership should remain spiritual leadership and the temporal power should not become too important in any church.

"I have no bias against the Roman Catholic Church and I have supported Governor Smith as Governor and worked for him as a candidate for the office of President of the United States. I have supported for public office many other Roman Catholic candidates.

"You speak of the Mindszenty case. I spoke out very clearly against any unfair type of trial and anything anywhere in any country which might seem like attack on an individual because of his religious beliefs. I can not, however, say that in European countries the control by the Roman Catholic Church of great areas of land has always led to happiness for the people of those countries.

"I have never visited hospitals and asked or thought about the religion of any boy in any bed. I have never in a military cemetery had any different feeling about the graves of the boys who lay there. All of our boys of every race, creed and color fought for the country and they deserve our help and gratitude.

"It is not my wish to deny children anywhere equal rights or benefits. It is, however, the decision of parents when they select a private or denominational school, whether it be Episcopal, Wesleyan, Jewish or Roman Catholic.

"I can assure you that I have no prejudice. I understand the beliefs of the Roman Catholic Church very well. I happen to be a Protestant and I prefer my own church, but that does not make me feel that any one has any less right to believe as his own convictions guide him.

"I have no intention of attacking you personally, nor of attacking the Roman Catholic Church, but I shall, of course, continue to stand for the things in our Government which I think are right. They may lead me to be in opposition to you and to other groups within our country, but I shall always act, as far as I am able, from real conviction and from honest belief.

"If you carefully studied my record, I think you would not find it one of anti-Catholic or anti-any-religious group.

"I assure you that I have no sense of being an 'unworthy American mother.' The final judgment, my dear Cardinal Spellman, of the worthiness of all human beings is in the hands of God.

"With deepest respect, I am

"Very sincerely yours

Administrative Squabble Stymies Howard Dropsy Study

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Government-sponsored research on dropsy has been stymied at Howard University by an administrative squabble, threatening collapse of the project, it was learned yesterday.

At stake is the research program of Dr. Samuel A. Corson, assistant professor of physiology there, whose dramatic results in relief of dropsy have attracted national attention and won two Public Health Service grants.

Dr. Corson disclosed yesterday that the dropsy project is continuing only at "great personal sacrifice" of his assistants whose salaries were stopped in the dispute over his own status with the university.

Already "great harm" has been done the continuing research program, and unless university officials act quickly, Dr. Corson said, the damage will be irreversible.

He charged that funds granted his research work by the National Heart Institute on July 15 are being held up by the refusal of Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, dean of the university's school of medicine to approve his (Corson's) revised budget for the project.

Because of this, Dr. Corson said, he has been unable to pay for supplies needed to continue the studies, or to move the research project to its summer base at the Mount Desert Biological Laboratories near Bar Harbor, Me.

Dr. Johnson refused to make any comment on the status of the research grant.

He pointed out that Dr. Corson's own teaching contract with the school was not renewed at its expiration on June 30. The university has since renewed Dr. Corson's salary on a temporary contract till he has an opportunity to appeal his case before the university board of trustees, on September 17.

"As his immediate superior," Dr. Johnson said, "I can say, I do not want the man on my staff."

Dr. Corson charged that the research fund tie-up is a "deliberate" attempt to "harass and embarrass me." His research assistant, A. L. Siegel, whose salary comes from the research grant fund, stayed on without assurance of pay until Monday, when the belated paycheck arrived, he said.

Still working on the dropsy project without pay, Dr. Corson said, is Miss Elizabeth J. O'Leary, former instructor in physiology there, who was given a 30-minute notice on June 30 that her teaching contract was not being renewed.

Dr. Charles J. Van Slyke, director of the National Heart Institute, at Bethesda, Md., authorized the following statement on the matter:

"The National Advisory Heart Council recommended and the Surgeon General has approved a grant to Howard University of $8000 to aid in the investigation of the causes and treatment of edema (dropsy) by Dr. Samuel A. Corson.

"Since the amount recommended differs from the amount requested a revised budget from the university is necessary before the grant can be paid."

It is this revised budget that Dr. Corson said he sent to Dean Johnson's office, where, he charged, it still remains.

The $8000 grant was approved to supplement an original grant of $5000 awarded by the Public Health Service agency to further Dr. Corson's research on a new infusion treatment for the relief of dropsy. Much of the experimental work has been with dogs, though several human cases have been treated with immediate and marked success, it has been reported.

Gay 'Hello' Given Ile de France on New York Arrival

New York, July 27 (U.P.).—The Ile de France, pride of the French merchant marine, arrived in New York today on her first luxury voyage since 1939. She received a welcome fit for a queen of the seas.

The fourth largest passenger ship afloat, the flagship of the French lines was greeted in New York harbor by the spray of New York City fireboats and the blasts of a "reception committee" of a half-dozen tugboats.

Grover Whalen, the city's official greeter, was there in a heat-dampened powder blue shirt to shake hands with the captain, Joseph Cailloce.

Crushed Nerve Therapy Held Valid in Polio

Nerve-crushing to restore muscle power in polio patients has proved itself valid under scientific study, a University of Pennsylvania investigator reported yesterday.

The technique of hammering and kneading nerves affected by infantile paralysis was developed during the war by Dr. Harvey Billig, Los Angeles orthopedic surgeon, and has since been repeatedly attacked as unsound.

Assigned to evaluate the technique, Dr. Robert Hodes, of the University of Pennsylvania, conducted special studies on 20 patients treated by the Billig method. His findings were published in the Journal of Applied Physiology.

Dr. Hodes concluded that the treatment, termed neurotripsy, does give renewed activity to muscles not completely denervated by infantile paralysis. In other words, he concluded, if there is still some life in the affected nerve, the neurotripsy will increase its activity.

The process is compared to hedge clipping where, when a main shoot is cut, it soon sprouts out with many more shoots. When the nerve ending is crushed, Dr. Hodes reported, it apparently regenerates a profusion of nerve fibers at the injured end to give new energy activity to affected muscles.

Theoretically, at least, Dr. Hodes reported, a partially paralyzed muscle might be given even greater power than it normally had, since muscle cells formerly devoid of nerve supply may benefit by the newly formed fibers.

Dr. Hodes reported that decreased activity of the muscles is noted after the first few months of neurotripsy, but that by the eighth month the action potential was 21.5 per cent greater than control values. He urged further study of the technique, declaring that even better results could be expected in carefully selected patients.

His study was supported by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

3 New Polio Cases Make Area Total 29

Two new polio cases were reported in Prince Georges County yesterday, plus the record of a third not previously listed. These brought the total for the Greater Washington area this year to 29.

The new cases were those of a 13-year-old boy from the 5800 block of Queens Chapel rd., Hyattsville, and a 5-year-old girl from the 4600 block of Woodberry rd., Riverdale. Both were admitted to Children's Hospital here.

The earlier case, one of the first in the area this year, was that of a 6-year-old boy from the 7000 block of Tucker rd., Oxon Hill, admitted to Children's Hospital in January, and reported discharged in March.

1441 New Polio Cases Reported Last Week

By the United Press

The Public Health Service reported yesterday that 1441 new polio cases were recorded throughout the Nation last week—about 42 per cent more than during the previous week.

The agency said 6339 cases have been reported so far this year compared with 4580 this time last year.

New Hormone Factor Helps In Arthritis

Chicago, July 27 (U.P.).—Armour & Co. scientists today disclosed the development of a hormone substance which they said has achieved "dramatic" preliminary success in the treatment of arthritis, rheumatic fever, gout and other diseases.

They hailed the development of the hormone Acth as "one of the most important medical discoveries ever made," and one which opens a "broad new area of medicine.

An Armour Research Laboratories statement said the hormone has been developed in pure form from the pituitary glands of hogs, and acts by stimulating the vital adrenal glands of the human body.

Dr. John R. Mote, Armour medical director, said "100 per cent success" was achieved in treating 50 cases of gout with Acth. Similar success was achieved in 25 arthritis cases and 20 rheumatic fever cases.

Mote said that despite the small number of cases treated, the results were so "dramatic" that Armour felt justified in being optimistic.

He said research has not yet progressed far enough to tell whether the diseases will recur after treatment with Acth is stopped.

Some 45 hospitals and clinics are cooperating with Armour in testing the drug, Mote said, and emphasized that reports on its initial successes have come from them.

Armour took note of the recently-announced development of Compound E by Mayo Clinic doctors. It said the two hormone substances were related, but vastly different.

Acth is developed from pituitary, which acts upon the adrenal glands to produce the adrenal cortical hormones, while Compound E appears to be one of the hormones that come from the adrenals, Armour said.

It takes 400,000 hog pituitaries to make a pound of Acth.

Even if all possible hog glands were obtained, yearly production would not exceed 60 pounds, enough to treat only a fraction of some seven million arthritis sufferers in the United States.

Amour scientists are trying now to find the nature of the Acth molecule so that the hormone may be synthesized from inexpensive chemical substances.

Voting in Virginia Pushed Up 1 Hour

Others Won't Say

5 Virginians In Congress Back Battle

By The Associated Press

Five Virginia members of Congress are on record favoring John S. Battle for Governor.

A sixth has announced he will support Horace H. Edwards in the primaries Tuesday.

The other five members of the Virginia delegation to Congress will not say whom they favor among the four Democratic candidates.

Lined up for Battle are Senators Byrd and Robertson and Representatives Smith, Stanley and Harrison.

Representative Bland has said he is supporting Edwards.

The five who have made no public statement said today in separate interviews they do not plan to. These are Representatives Gary, Hardy, Abbitt, Burton and Fugate.

It is understood, although there is no confirmation, that Gary and Fugate will vote for Edwards, and that Burton will vote for Battle.

There was no indication how Hardy and Abbitt will vote.

No member of the delegation has said publicly he will support either of the other two gubernatorial candidates—Francis Pickens Miller and Remmie Arnold.

Robertson made known his choice early in the year. He sent a telegram to Battle promising his support.

Byrd, who heads the dominant wing of the State's Democratic Party, announced his support of Battle at a rally in Harrisonburg.

Stanley, who in early campaign talk figured as a possible candidate himself, said last January he would not run and "I expect to give my full support to the candidacy of Senator John S. Battle."

Smith has called for the nomination of Battle in a number of speeches.

Bland, dean of the Virginia delegation, made an early announcement of support for Edwards.

Both Alexandria and Arlington yesterday announced changes in the hours of voting at Tuesday's gubernatorial primary to conform with a ruling given Fairfax County Tuesday by Virginia's attorney general.

Election officials in both communities said voting will start and stop an hour earlier than scheduled, with the polls opening at 6:30 a. m. and closing at 7:30 p. m. daylight saving time.

In Falls Church, absence from the city of Electoral Board Chairman Walter Mess held up announcement of the city's voting hours, although the city was expected to conform with the other communities.

Arlington officials said voters had already been told polls would be open from 7:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m., and asked that this earlier information be disregarded.

In Alexandria, where a City Council was elected last month under the later hours, voters were warned to forget the time regulations controlling that election and keep in mind the new hours.

Confusion over the voting hours for communities on daylight saving time started Tuesday when Fairfax County officials received an answer to a question they had asked Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr.

State election laws say that for summer elections, polls will be open from 6:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. Eastern Standard Time. This would be 7:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. daylight saving time.

But the enabling act under which the nearby Virginia communities adopted daylight saving time stated that daylight saving time should control certain events including elections. Fairfax officials asked Almond which applied in their case.

The attorney general's answer was that Fairfax County polls should open at 6:30 a. m. and close at 7:30 p. m. daylight saving time.

Woman Wins $15,000

Manchester, N. H., July 27 (U.P.) — Mrs. Andrew Zyla, 35, thought it was a joke when she was called by a radio quiz program (Spin to Win) tonight but she learned the truth in time to identify the song, "The Hucklebuck," played backward, and win $15,000 in prizes.

Gershwin's Tunes Pack Watergate

By Paul Hume

Gershwin Night at the Watergate packed in the crowds more than anything else this summer.

With Jane Pickens to sing Gershwin songs and Abba Bogin playing the piano in the Rhapsody in Blue, the night was filled with music from 20 years of the composer's life.

It all took me back to the days when I played in the Mayflower lounge. Night after night people asked for Embraceable You, The Man I Love, Somebody Loves Me or Summertime. Those are songs that keep going for decades.

Jane Pickens sang them the way they ought to be sung—easily, gently in spots, and with punch at the end of I Got Rhythm or Wintergreen for President.

Miss Pickens not only sang—she did her own introductions with notes on the shows in which the songs first were heard, those she liked best, and who wrote the words for them all.

The orchestral arrangements for her songs came with the singer. They were the smooth, silky kind we know from radio and the orchestra really played them. Muted brass and hep boys in the percussion made everything come out just right.

Howard Mitchell swayed and swung in what looked like the real thing—whatever the tricks are, he kept good company with his handsome Georgia singer. Around her songs he put the usual excerpts from Porgy and Bess, Gershwin's finest score, plus an American in Paris, one of the weakest.

Opening the evening the orchestra played "Strike Up the Band" and at the end, the Rhapsody. Bogin turned in a competent account of the music. It's hard to make it more than a standard affair these days. Again the orchestra was on the beam with the soloist.

The huge crowd, largest of the year, swarmed over steps, roadway and the front seats. There were more canoes than on an earlier night, and more people scattered around on the grass below the Lincoln Memorial. It was a typical Gershwin concert, with plenty of people and plenty of Gershwin.

Almond Tells Legal Test For Primary

By The Associated Press

Virginia's Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond said yesterday the test of a voter's party affiliation as prescribed by law is how the person voted with reference to congressional nominees in the last preceding election.

This was an apparent contradiction of a view expressed informally Tuesday when Almond told a reporter a Democrat in next Tuesday's primary is any voter who pledges to support the nominees of the Democratic primary.

However, Almond, in a statement issued from Franklin, said this was his personal view but that whether he agreed with the purpose and intent of section 228 is "a matter of no moment."

Almond was quoted Tuesday as saying "a voter who pledges support to the primary nominees of the Democratic Party in the forthcoming general election November 8 has the right to request a Democratic ballot and vote in the Democratic primary." He indicated the same held for Republican voters.

The attorney general said today, however, this was merely "an informal opinion as to what I felt that the law should be on this subject."

"I am fully cognizant of the provisions of Section 228 of the Virginia election laws and my previously rendered formal opinion in construction thereof."

Almond referred to his opinion on June 9, 1948, given to Hugh B. Marsh, Commonwealth's attorney of Fairfax County. In this opinion Almond held:

The election law "provides that to be eligible to vote in any party primary a person must be a member of that party . . . in the last preceding general election in which such person participated, he or she voted for the nominees of such party.

"If any person voted for the nominees of one party in the last preceding general election in which he participated, he is not in my opinion entitled to vote in a primary held by another party. If he is not entitled to vote in such primary, I do not think he is entitled to ask for a ballot for such primary."

Patient Briton Waits 33 Years for Divorce

London, July 27 (AP).—William George Broderick lived only 12 days with his wife back in 1916.

The 57-year-old husband explained he hadn't been able to afford it before.

District Commissioners Hit Senate's Idea of Home Rule

Hodgkins, Fadler, Hill, Mars, Mrs. Beshers, Cummins, Roberts, Mrs. Sillers, Miss Altman, Mrs. Newman

provided a responsible majority of them want it, and provided there are adequate safeguards which will conserve the benefits bestowed on this city by its present form of government and grant to the citizens the right to govern their local affairs without administrative interference from Federal agencies and yet will protect the paramount rights of the Federal Government in its own Capital with respect to Federal matters."

Deane

Young then threw a broadside at three key provisions of the home rule bill:

1. Legislative procedure: The bill would let the home rule District Council—which would replace the Commissioners—write "legislative proposals" which would take effect as law if not vetoed by Congress within 45 days, or by the President within the following 10 days.

Young said there was sharp conflict in legal opinion about whether the proposed legislative process would be constitutional. Until the issue could be settled by the courts, he said, there would be "great uncertainty in the District." He said, as an example, that if by the new procedure, a change was made in the law for executing and acknowledging deeds, real estate buyers would not know, until the courts decided, whether they go by the old or the new law.

Young pointed out that under the separate home rule bill of Representative James C. Auchincloss, council proposals would not become law until affirmatively approved by Congress and the President. In the Senate measure, he said "there is no provision for Congress amending the (council) proposal. If there is any provision in the proposal to which the Congress or the President objects, the proposal must be disapproved in toto. Very few bills pass Congress without amendment."

He said another section of the bill goes even further with respect to emergency legislation, and permits a legislative proposal to go into effect immediately upon certification by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of (its) necessity."

2. Borrowing—The bill authorizes borrowing for public improvements. They would have to be approved by the council, the Congress, the President, and a public referendum. There would be a top limit on borrowing equal to 5 per cent of the assessed taxable property valuation here.

Young emphasized that this could lead to an 80 million dollar District debt. To pay the principal and interest, he said, the council could levy increased property taxes, but no other kind of taxes. "Thus the real estate and tangible personal property in the District are primarily charged with the payment of the bonds. Over 50 per cent of the land in the District is exempt from taxation. Thus there would be hanging over every real estate owner in the District the threat of a substantial increase in his property taxes, which might substantially affect property values."

3. Election provisions: The bill makes as a main qualification for voting one-year residence in the District, and has the expressed aim of permitting participation in the District home rule elections by those who have State and national voting privileges elsewhere.

Young keyed his protest to this plan to his views on the borrowing feature. He said the Commissioners oppose extending the right to vote here to persons who are not domiciled in the District, and are opposed to voting here by persons who can vote elsewhere.

"It may be pointed out that temporary residents in the District will have a tendency to vote for the members of the District council who promise most in the way of immediate public improvements to be financed by bond issues," Young wrote. "Such temporary residents will not be concerned with the tax burden imposed upon the permanent residents and upon those who come into the District later, but will be primarily concerned with securing public improvements which they may enjoy at the present time."

After numerous other criticisms of specific features of the bill, Young concluded his letter with this paragraph: "Time has not permitted the ascertainment of advice from the Bureau of the Budget as to the relationship of this report to the program of the President."

Action Urged by Truman

The letter was dated July 14. President Truman wrote Speaker Rayburn Monday urging that the home rule bill be sent to him to sign into law at this session of Congress.

In the start of yesterday's hearing, Representative Deane reminded the subcommittee of his membership in the last Congress on the subcommittee headed by Representative Auchincloss that sponsored the home-rule measure then.

He said his work then "convinced me beyond any reasonable doubt that the citizens of the District should have restored to them the right to participate in their own local government."

He said both the Senate bill and Representative Auchincloss' new bill "represent an intelligent and sincere effort to make democracy real and make it work in the Nation's Capital."

He said he had often wondered what young District residents must think when they hear members of Congress demand the granting of free elections to downtrodden peoples in Europe and Asia, "and then deny any form of local self-government to the people of this great city."

Sees Warping of Minds

He said continued failure to grant home rule would "warp" scores of young minds here, while granting it would result in "a healthy government that the Congress and the Nation would be proud to recognize."

Others Urging Approval

Others who urged approval of home rule included: William A. Roberts, Washington attorney and former people's counsel before the District Public Utilities Commission; Mrs. Hugh Beshers, Women's Alliance of All Souls Unitarian Church; Miss Sylvia Altman, Central Suffrage Conference; Charles S. Hill, Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders Union, AFL; William F. Fader, jr., District Young Democratic Club; Mrs. Charlotte Sillers, Women's Auxiliary, United Public Workers, CIO; George W. Hodgkins, Kalorama Citizens Association; Mrs. Sarah Newman, Potomac Cooperative Federation; Ben Cummins, auto dealer, and Robert Mars, furniture wholesaler.

Capital Bank Earnings Rise In Six Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined net income of Washington's 19 banks totaled $2,658,000, after income taxes, in the first six months this year, according to the semiannual statement of the Comptroller of Currency.

This was an increase of $875,000 over the $1,783,000 netted in the first half of 1948.

The net in the latest period was equivalent to an annual return of 7.61 per cent on capital funds. This compared with a return of 5.26 per cent last year.

Net operating earnings of the local institutions totaled $4,402,000 in the first six months, compared with $3,775,000 in the same 1948 period.

Gross operating earnings of $12,589,000 compared with $11,739,000 in the first half last year. Increases were shown in interest on loans, service charges, and income from trust departments. On the other hand a small ddecline was experienced in income from Government bond interest.

Increases were reported for all operating expenses with the single exception of interest on time deposits, which totaled $718,000 against $762,000 last year. Bank officers' payroll rose to $1,314,000 from $1,210,000, while other employes showed a total payroll of $2,874,000 against $2,704,000 last year.

The continued upward trend in bank earnings here was in the face of a reported decline in New York, Detroit and other large cities. It was another indication of the relative stability of Washington business, when the rest of the country is undergoing a recession.

ACACIA PROGRESS: More than 60 million dollars of new business was written by Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. in the first six months this year, President William Montgomery reported to directors yesterday. Total insurance in force exceeded 912 million dollars and assets passed the 200-million mark. Two members of the District of Columbia Branch were among the top 20 producers during the period. They are Chick Gove, jr., who ranked third, and Charles Hughes who stood sixteenth. Of $10,750,000 new mortgage loans made this year, Acacia reported more than three million dollars invested in the Metropolitan Washington area.

ELECTIONS: J. P. Stedehouder, credit manager of Lansburgh & Bro., was reelected president of the Credit Bureau, Inc., of Washington. Also reelected were Samuel E. Collegeman of S. Kann Sons as vice president, and John K. Althaus as secretary - treasurer. In addition to these officers, directors include: Harry N. Aiken of Grosner's, Leo Baum of the Goldenberg Co., Benjamin Blanken of Chas. Schwartz & Son; Abe Coonin of William Hahn & Co., Edward A. Henkel of Raleigh Haberdasher, Elsie M. Lee of Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., Roscoe W. Reichard of the Hecht Co., Herbert J. Rich of B. Rich's Sons, Frank P. Scott of Woodward & Lothrop, and Ben Stein of Bensons Jewelry Co.

STORE SALES: Washington department store sales in the first six months showed a sales gain of 2 per cent over the like 1948 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond noted yesterday. June sales here were unchanged from the similar month last year. The Fifth Reserve District displayed sales drops of 4 per cent for June and 2 per cent for the six-month period.

ODD LOTS: Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food index this wee' rose to $5.73 from $5.71 a week ago, but remained 20.2 per cent below the year-ago level of $7.18. Armco Steel Corp. has authorized immediate construction of a new 12-million-dollar steel plant at Middletown, Ohio . . . Price of lead advanced yesterday another one quarter to 14½ cents a pound. A stockholder's suit against Willys-Overland Motors charging waste of assets has been dismissed by a Wilmington court . . . A group headed by Lehman Brothers and Blyth & Co., Inc., yesterday reoffered a $50,300,000 issue of New York City Housing Authority bonds at a yield of 0.85 per cnet for those maturing September 1, 1951, to 2.85 per cent for those maturing in 1999.

EARNINGS: Union Carbide & Carbon Corp. reported net income of $42,126,139 or $1.46 a common share for the first half of this year, against $47,061,574 or $1.63 a share in the same 1948 period. Other earnings reports:

Babs Stanwyck Rolls Boxcars

By Richard L. Coe

BARBARA STANWYCK, you'll be delighted to learn, is having a fearful struggle with herself at Keith's. She's discovered a new disease.

It's gambling, the same vice over which Clark Gable triumphs, winnings and wife intact, at the Palace. Barbara's vehicle is titled, "The Lady Gambles," and though she does so because she was brought up by a spinster sister, mama having died when Barbara was born, Barbara's gambling leads her into the depths. The very depths.

True, Barbara once before gambled on the screen in "The Lady Eve," an early Preston Sturges comedy. If you're a bit long in the tooth, you'll remember this as one of the merriest ever. There was no psychological reasoning in that one; Barbara and Papa Eric Blore were just plain naughty and no childhood stresses were probed.

As usual in the current Hollywood story-telling method, this yarn is told in flashback. Blondined Barbara is rolled into a hospital, considerably mauled, having been using loaded dice. Husband Robert Preston tells a doctor, and incidentally you, how Barbara descended into this pit within two brief years.

He was a newsman, she a photographer when they went to Las Vegas on a yarn. In "Vegas," as the transitory natives seem to call it, Barbara develops a yen for dice, poker and other gentle games. She steals the paper's expense money, but manages to cover her theft. In an effort to make her forget this naughty, incipient habit, Preston takes her to Mexico (doesn't he ever read the travel folders?), where she burns up his $1400 savings in a night he's conveniently spent at a library.

From here Barbara goes down, down, down. It's all explained with that facile psychology dear to the movies by the fact that her sister, who scarcely shows her face, is a clinging vine and blames Barbara for her husbandless state.

Such didoes are quite up Barbara's alley and even John Wayne must shudder at the beating she takes from some thugs. There's an aquiline-nosed gambler in the person of Stephen McNally, who is permitted to kiss her smartly on the incissors, the while, presumably, she thinks longingly of Husband Preston or hatefully of Sister Edith Barrett.

It's all a harrowing emotional binge, I can tell you, and if your wife comes back from the hairdresser's with the old straight plaits and a gleam in her eye, this may give you a clew as to what she's been doing. If she's got a spinster older sister who brought her up from babyhood, I'm afraid you're in for a troublesome couple of years.

"THE LADY GAMBLES." Universal-International release produced by Michel Kraike. Screen play by Roy Huggins, adapted by Halsted Welles from a story by Lewis Meltzer and Oscar Saul. Photographed by Russell Metty. Directed by Michael Gordon. At Keith's.

Kay Francis in a Comedy at the Olney

Kay Francis

But, as I say, Miss Francis behaves every minute as if the cameras were whirring away and celluloid were recording each word, every gesture for the far-flung millions. She manages to say "Oh, Bob," or "My dear Townley" as if they were fraught with dramatic sizzle. She makes the word "Exactly" sound like a sentence and roars like Tallulah after she says it, implying that "exactly" is a bon mot of utter brilliance.

This is a considerable accomplishment and I do not mean to reflect on Miss Francis' talents by remarking on it. She is playing Kitty Brown, a divorced woman tricked by an aged Westchester hostess into winning her former husband away from an impressionable granddaughter, and she is playing her as though she believed every word of Miss Crothers' plot.

Chic Miss Francis (the lady's name has long played steady company with "chic" and unmistakably still does), is so adept at accepting cliche lines that, in both Act II and Act III, she manages to let a tear slide down her right cheek. This command of the tear duct may be an old trick, but like the roller coaster at Glen Echo, it never fails to bemuse me. Its outward evidence of the brave little woman inside is an ageless lure to ladies sitting in theaters, and Olney's opening night ladies were plainly rapt by the Francis sincerity.

The fact that Miss Crothers' play creaks should be no surprise, though I confess it was so to me. The Crothers repute for slick playwrighting haunts many typewriters and I only regret I'm no longer a lady's or a gentleman's balcony. My eyebrows are now raised only by an unmade bed.

Of Miss Francis' supporting company, let a cannon be fired in honor of June Dayton, honey-haired, tiny and a most appealing bundle. Miss Dayton has joined the Olney stalwarts as ingenue and is, I'm told, Dean Harens' wife.

Harens is on tap in an insipid role, one of Kay's romantic victims, and he seems wet behind the ears for such a challenge. Joel Ashley is Kay's estranged husband and William H. Putch has something of a time as a tongue-tied admirer. Maida Reade plays the old lady on whose tongue swear words pass for wit.

S. Syrjala's outdoor living room is a genuinely outstanding creation of the set-designer's art, a flossy rusticity that well befits Miss Francis and is far less perishable than the play. R. L. C.

Workings of Veterans Preference Act Being Studied for President

The President is having his own study made on the operations of the Veterans' Preference Act in Government.

This was revealed yesterday to the Frear subcommittee of the Senate Civil Service Committee by Joseph E. Winslow of the Budget Bureau. Winslow was called before the group to explain his agency's views on a bill by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) to carry out the Hoover Commission's recommendations on personnel management. When he came to the section which would revamp the Veterans Preference Act, Winslow testified:

"This subject is under consideration at the present time by the President, and I am therefore unable to comment on the provisions of the section."

The President, it was learned, will recommend to Congress a comprehensive personnel program for the Government—one that will cover pay, promotions, discharges, efficiency ratings, etc. Possible changes in the hiring and firing of veterans will appear in his program, which is being drafted jointly by the Civil Service Commission and the Budget Bureau. The President's proposals can be expected to differ in some respects from the Hoover suggestions.

Meantime, the Frear subcommittee will delay action on the McCarthy bill until after it receives the Administration's counter-proposals.

Winslow did suggest a major change in the Government's personnel policy. He asked that CSC be given authority to limit the number of people who could apply for certain of its tests. He said the number of applicants should be enough to "economically and effectively meet the needs of the service."

The Budget Bureau official also said it would be "most desirable" for Congress to fix maximum and minimum rates of pay and to give CSC power to set salaries within those rates.

"This provision," Winslow said, "would provide much more flexibility in pay-fixing to meet current conditions and would make frequent statutory adjustments in pay scales unnecessary."

POSTOFFICE VS. GAO: Officials of these agencies clashed yesterday before the Frear group on bills to streamline accounting operations of the Post Office Department.

Another McCarthy bill is supported by the General Accounting Office. The Administration and the Postoffice Department are behind a bill by Senator Frear (D., Del.). Both bills claim to carry out the intent of the Hoover Commission recommendations.

Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson charged the GAO bill would add to the red tape in his department. He testified: "I don't care to be tied further by red tape. We have enough of it now." He said he was sure Comptroller General Lindsey Warren would oppose the bill if he were Postmaster General.

Speaking for GAO, Frank Weitzel said the McCarthy bill would merely give GAO authority to make an independent post-audit of postoffice's many accounts, and also, to set up a system to recover funds spent illegally.

In any event, GAO's postal accounts division at Asheville, N. C., would be reorganized and heavy cuts made in its personnel.

Donaldson was critical of this division. He said he had to personally rewrite and sign 20-odd travel orders this week because the GAO unit objected to a single word in the orders, a costly action.

HEAT: The Government's heat policy, it seems, works well when the weather is comfortable and cool. But it hasn't worked to the satisfaction of all concerned during this heat wave. Officials and employes alike are fussing about it. Some are excused while others in equally hot offices are kept at their desks Employes in Agriculture, Treasury and Commerce agencies were among those protesting yesterday about not being dismissed early in the afternoon.

Meantime, there are reports that the heat policy may be toughened up. As one official explained: "If the heat wave continues we can't continue to release our employes every afternoon We have too much work to do."

Mother Raped After Intruder Threatens Girl

Police Are Told Man Said He Would Attack Her Daughter, 4

A 34-year-old housewife told police she was raped early yesterday by an intruder who forced her to submit by threatening to attack her 4-year-old daughter.

The victim, who lives in the Kalorama rd. nw area, is a native of El Salvador, who has lived in Washington for seven years.

She told officers the man entered her apartment by the back porch about 2:30 a.m., awakened her in her bedroom and forced her to accompany him to the living room. She said she was attacked there.

Because the victim speaks English only with difficulty, she called neighbors after the man left. They in turn called police. The police broadcast a lookout order for the intruder, describing him as a Negro about 22 years old; 5 feet, 8 inches tall, and wearing a white shirt, brown hat and gray trousers.

The victim told police her husband has been in a hospital here for two years

Falls Church Votes to Pay For Schooling

The Falls Church School Board last night voted to pay for the education of Negro high school pupils who are forced to attend classes elsewhere because there are no facilities in the city.

The board authorized superintendent Irvin H. Schmitt to make "appropriate arrangements" for education of the Negro pupils with the understanding that tuition rates would be paid by the board. Schmitt said there will be only eight pupils eligible for this type of aid next fall.

Earlier the superintendent told the board that Arlington County had agreed to accept the pupils at a yearly tuition rate of $150 per student. The board did not specifically select the school to be used.

The educational problem fell in the lap of the school board on June 2, when the city was given control of its schools, whch formerly were incorporated in the Fairfax County system. Until that time the county had transported Negro pupils to a regional school at Manassas, Va., where they were enrolled without cost.

At last night's meeting the school board also approved a proposal to lease a four-room apartment in the Rust Building on W. Broad st. for school headquarters. The space, now occupied by a private family as living quarters, will be available August 1.

Costa Rica Composer Conducts AF Band

Julio Fonseca, Costa Rican composer, led the United States Air Force Band last night in one of his own works, "Gran Fantasia Sinfonica."

The program was presented before 800 invited guests on the esplanade of the Pan American Union Building. Hosts for the evening were the Ambassador of Costa Rica and Senora de Esquivel.

Consumption Of Water Near Record

The summer's prolonged hot spell is doing big things to the city water consumption figures.

Water Division Superintendent David V. Auld predicted yesterday that Washington will break all records on water consumption this month. On Tuesday—one of those 96-degree days—the city lapped up 213,500,000 gallons.

Already this month the District's daily water intake has averaged 190 million gallons. Record consumption day was July 6 when 216,500,000 gallons of water were consumed.

Last August was previously the top water consumption month with a daily output of over 175 million

But Auld gave strong assurances that the municipal water system was in fine shape. Though he asks residents to be as sparing as possible, there is no present need to curtail such uses as sprinkling the lawn.

Auld lays the soaring water output figures entirely to the weather and wide use of air-conditioning units.

In surrounding counties, officials also reported greatly increased water consumption but nowhere was a shortage in sight.

In Falls Church, Va., and Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties in Maryland, an order has been in effect more than a month prohibiting sprinkling of lawns as a precautionary measure to maintain a safe reservoir of water in event of fires.

Civic Groups' Views Sought By Lofstrand

To get grass roots sentiment for the 1950 Maryland General Assembly, Montgomery County civic groups and the County Council are being asked their views on everything from divorce laws to comic books.

Their slant is being sought by Anders R. Lofstrand, chairman of the Montgomery County delegation to the Assembly, and a member of the State-wide Maryland Legislative Council, which studies and prepares bills for the legislative mill.

Civic groups are being sent copies of 28 resolutions adopted in last winter's Assembly session and calling for Legislative Council study.

One asks the council to examine the problem of selecting members of local boards of education, now appointed by the Governor. Another requests a survey of college education for Negroes.

One deals with the sale and distribution of "so-called comic books" to minors, another with increased payments to retired teachers.

Lofstrand said the council had met twice and will continue meeting monthly until the Assembly convenes in February.

The group also is seeking civic organization reaction to bills and resolutions defeated in the last Assembly.

Senate Sends Judge Bill to White House

6 of 27 New U. S. Court Posts in D. C.; Private-Practice Provision Dropped

The Senate late yesterday sent to the White House the bill to add 27 judges to the Federal bench, six of them in Washington.

Final clearance for the bill came with Senate approval by a voice vote of a conference report recommending that special private-practice qualifications for the local District Court appointments be dropped from the bill.

The bill as cleared allots three more judges to the present 12-judge District Court here, and 3 more to the present 6-judge Court of Appeals here.

The Senate originally had adopted a provision that the three judges for the District Court here meet certain private-practice and non-government employment qualifications.

Substitute Attempt Fails

An attempt was made in conference to substitute a plan for all District judges to disqualify themselves in cases involving a Government department with which they had been connected in the preceding 10 years. Finally the conference scrapped all these features.

But they were recalled before the bill cleared the Senate by Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) who said he felt their sponsor, Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), had been right in his view they should go in the bill. McCarran explained he had agreed to drop the special qualifications so that the bill could be enacted.

But he agreed with Ferguson that another bill should be presented dealing with the qualifications of Federal judges. McCarran said he would join Ferguson in sponsoring such a bill.

Meanwhile, Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens of the U. S. Court of Appeals here joined with a score of other witnesses in urging a House Judiciary Subcommittee to approve a bill giving a $9500 annual pay boost to the Chief Justice of the United States, and $5000 annual increases to all other Federal judges.

Urged By Commission

Judge Stephens said the Hoover commission had urged a "substantial increase" in judicial and legislative salaries, as well as executive salaries. An executive pay increase bill, boosting Cabinet officers from $15,000 to $25,000 and increasng pay of some 240 other top officials, has cleared the House and is pending in the Senate. Judge Stephens said the "historic relation" between judicial and executive salaries should be preserved.

The judges' salary bill would set up this new scale: Chief Justice of the United States, $35,000, associate justices of the Supreme court, $30,000, judges of the Federal Appellate Courts, the Court of Claims, and the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, $22,500; judges of Federal District Courts, the Tax Court and Customs Court, $20,000 and the chief judge of District Court here, $20,500.

Judge Stephens indorsed the proposed salary scales as ones that would be reasonably commensurate with those paid judges of comparable responsibility in the more populous States and in England.

Judge Stephens said the present salary scale is inadequate in view of the cost of living.

Another witness who testified for the pay increase was Jerome Barnard, president of the District Bar Association. Barnard said the Association "wholeheartedly indorses this bill."

Garners Fail To Win Stay Of Execution

Brothers Scheduled To Die Friday for 1948 Holdup-Slaying

The United States Court of Appeals refused to grant a stay of execution for George A. and Lawrence J. Garner after a three-hour special session last evening.

The Garner brothers are scheduled to die Friday in the District Jail electric chair for the holdup murder of a taxicab driver in early 1948.

The two men presented to the court four petitions. Included were two demands by counsel for a mental examination and a stay of execution and two petitions by the men apparently designed to completely reopen their case with a new trial.

Speaking for the bench at the conclusion of the proceeding, Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens said:

"We do not think there is any merit in these matters. The public interest must be protected as well as the rights of litigants. We granted this late and lengthy hearing so that time might intervene before the execution and there would be sufficient time for an application to the Supreme Court.

"There have been altogether too many delays. The processes of justice must go forward and the execution should be carried out."

Louis Jongbloet, defense counsel, had asked for just a few days in which to get affidavits from a priest and friends of the defendants to prove they are insane and cannot be legally executed.

"We will grant no further stay on the showing before us. This was a very serious crime. There was a thorough trial, a careful review by this court and a denial of a writ of certiorari by the Supreme Court before this case was brought here now," said Judge Stephens.

Jongbloet, the court ruled in agreement with Assistant United States Attorney C. Frank Reifsnyder, had presented no actual evidence that the Garners are now insane.

Castle has asked a number of Washington residents to become members of the organization here. He pointed out that since 1887, 10 major efforts have been made to reorganize the Federal Government, all of which failed. The Hoover plan, he said, must succeed.

Messenger Trailed Robbers

Youth, Cabbie Prove Heroes In Capture of Two Bandits

Heroes roles were played by a messenger boy and a cab driver in the capture of two of three bandits who held up a Western Union office Tuesday night, police disclosed yesterday.

Singled out for police praise were Frazier E. Hemphill, 19, Western Union messenger, of 1335 15th st. nw., and William P. Leer, 24, the cab driver, of 809 Kennedy st. nw.

Their actions resulted in the capture of James Kesel 27, and William A. Bradshaw, 30, both of Fredericksburg, Va., within a few minutes after a Western Union office at 1728 Connecticut ave. nw. had been held up and robbed of $392.

Jack Kesel

Bradshaw

The third suspect, Jack Kesel, 27, brother of James, was picked up yesterday afternoon by Virginia State police in a poolroom in Fredericksburg and returned to Washington by Detective Sergts. W. L. Sparshott and P. A. Deenahan of the Metropolitan police.

Police said the men readily admitted the holdup. The Kesel brothers, police said, also confessed to the $585 holdup of another Western Union office at 1317 New York ave. nw. on July 7.

James Kesel and Bradshaw were arraigned yesterday in Municipal Court. Judge Thomas D. Quinn ordered them held in $5000 bond each for action of the grand jury.

The holdup of the Connecticut ave. office took place late Tuesday night. Three men walked in, held up the night manager, Richard M. Lawson, and escaped with $392.

When they left, Hemphill followed them. The bandits split up and two of them headed toward Massachusetts ave. Hemphill kept on the trail of the two men, meanwhile, waving his flashlight to try and attract attention.

The two gunmen turned on the messenger boy and threatened to shoot him if he persisted in following them. However, Hemphill kept on their trail.

Finally, Leer, the cab driver, came on the scene and picked up Hemphill. While they kept the bandits in sight, Leer used his two-way radio to contact his dispatcher who in turn notified police of the situation. A squad car was first to reach the scene and Kesel and Bradshaw were arrested without a struggle near 23rd st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

After Jack Kesel's return here from Fredericksburg, he related that a need for cash to finance the arrival of his wife's expected baby motivated the two Western Union holdups here, police said.

"I was broke and needed money to pay for the baby," police quoted him.

Police said he told them the first holdup didn't yield enough to cover the maternal expenses so they came back to stage a second holdup.

Police said Jack Kesel told them that after the holdup he ran as far as George Washington University Hospital, sat on the curb and rested, then took a cab to Alexandria, another cab to Triangle, Va., and finally, a bus to Fredericksburg.

When James Kesel was captured, he was carrying a 45-caliber pistol and $380 of the $392 taken in the holdup, poilce said. Bradshaw, said by police to be AWOL from the Army, told detectives he threw away his weapon after the holdup. Police said the weapon was recovered yesterday in the 2100 block of S st. nw.

3 Companies Put Out Fire At Berwyn

A Shell gasoline station house on Washington blvd. in Berwyn, Md. caught fire last night and kept three fire companies working for an hour before it was subdued.

Firemen were not immediately able to determine the cause of the blaze, which did not ignite the gas tanks. The roof and most of the inside of the structure were burned out, causing about $1500 damage, firemen said.

The station had been closed for the night and no one was on the premises. Firemen from College Park, Berwyn Heights and Branchville fought the blaze.

Another fire of undetermined origin burned out a two-story vacant house at the corner of Firth-Sterling ave. and Stevens rd. se. last night.

Although it was brought under control, the building burned for more than an hour. Firemen were unable to locate the owner.

Group of 34 Forms to Aid D. C. Racial Relations

Unit Is 'Sincerely, Honestly Committed To Task' Of Helping Situation in Capital

A new interracial group to improve race relations in Washington was formed yesterday with impetus from members of the federations of citizens and civic associations.

As yet unnamed, the group will be composed of 17 Negro and 17 white citizens. "Sincerely and honestly committed to the task of improving race relations in the Nation's Capital," it announced.

The full committee has not yet met, but concrete proposals are expected to be mapped out at a meeting within three days.

The suggested purposes of the committee are "to obtain basic data and information on tensions, employment, housing, human rights, population, organization activities, etc., as they affect human relations; to analyze the facts to formulate committee policy and disseminate information; to generate constructive and unprejudiced public attitudes with respect to racial, ethnic and religious groups; to treat conflict situations, combat discrimination and cooperate with other organizations in seeking solution to problems of housing, health and medical care."

Aim "to Make People Happy"

The committee announced its ambition "to make all the people residing in this our Nation's Capital, happy and contended."

Clifford H. Newell, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, has been acting chairman of the group. He said yesterday that two weeks ago he contacted Charles C. Barrett School Contract Is Let For $246,787

Arlington County's 6½-million-dollar school expansion program moved another step forward yesterday with the letting of a $246,787 contract for extension and remodeling of the Kate Waller Barrett School in Buckingham.

The contract was awarded by the Arlington School Board to Sharpe & Hamaker, Inc., of Arlington. Nine bids were submitted, with figures ranging up to $275,000. It was the fourth contract let in the new expansion program.

Specifications call for six new classrooms to be added to the 10 making up the Barrett school at present, plus a combination auditorium-playroom. The contract also calls for landscaping, construction of two paved play courts and a driveway leading from the road up to the school.

The remodeled school will be one of Arlington's largest elementary schools. The new classrooms will be completed in time for the February, 1950, semester.

32,000 Ballots Are Received In Silver Spring Mock Election

Silver Spring's mock election of a "mayor," which started as a promotion gag, yesterday had turned into a free-swinging political battle, complete with 32,000 votes and a wave of ballot-box stuffing.

Charles H. Kopeland, executive secretary of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, mopped his forehead and stared gloomily at the mass of ballots.

"It's gone beyond the gag stage," he said. "Some prominent citizens are taking this so seriously they're demanding the votes be recounted."

The "election," sponsored by the board's retail merchants' committee in connection with Shop Silver Spring Week, officially ended Monday. That was the deadline for the mailing in of ballots, printed in three local newspapers.

"Right now," Kopeland said, "we're examining every ballot with a magnifying glass to make sure there are no ringers." This, he explained, was to make certain the paper ballots were of the same stock used in the newspapers.

"We heard one candidate had 5000 ballots printed up in a Washington shop," Kopeland said. "The ballot check thus far has unearthed about 400 ringers."

The race, it seems, has nine leading contenders, each within a few votes of each other. The six runners-up will become members of the "Silver Spring Council."

Because of the delay in recounting ballots, Kopeland said results won't be announced until Friday.

R. D. Conrad, Retired Navy Captain, Dies

New York, July 27 (AP).—Naval Capt. Robert D. Conrad (retired), assistant director of the Brookhaven National Laboratory for the past two years, died at Memorial Hospital yesterday.

Conrad, who suffered leukemia during his last three years, interested cancer researchers in the development of a new microscope.

Learning that his life might be cut short by leukemia—sometimes called a sort of cancer of the white blood cells—he worked to interest scientists and industrialists in the campaign against cancer.

Meanwhile, the captain, a resident of Bellport on Long Island, continued his work at the laboratory at Upton, N. Y., a center for research in nuclear sciences.

One of those whom Captain Conrad interested in the fight on cancer is Dr. Edwin H. Land, president of the Polaroid Corp. of Boston. He joined in developing a color-transition microscope, used in cancer research.

Captain Conrad cooperated with the General Electric Co. and Radio Corp. of America research department. Out of this there developed a Council of Engineering Societies to advance medical research.

Conrad, a graduate of the United States Naval Academy in 1927, retired from the Navy in 1947. During the war he was director of the planning division of the Navy's Office of Research and Invention.

Nats End Loss Streak, 7-6, Start New One, 11-0

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BEFORE the week is out, Senor Sandalio Consuegra and Senor Roberto Ortiz will be inducted as the newest members of the Washington baseball club. They are Cuba's gifts to the Nats and thus probably should not be looked in the mouth, but the temptation is too great.

Such is the skimpy background of Consuegra, a pitcher, that little can be ascertained about him, except for the fact that the other day he pitched a nice five-hitter for Havana of the Class B Florida-International League. Unfortunately, he was beaten, 2-1, by Miami of the same league.

POVICH

Unfortunately, too, Senor Consuegra comes highly recommended by Joe Cambria, the Nats' chief scout. If all the highly-touted Cubans wearing the label of approval by Cambria were laid end to end, it would be a good idea. Cambria is so free with his "can't miss" recommendations that they are meaningless except in terms of high skepticism.

But Senor Ortiz we know something about. He's been around before, and first was ushered into a Washington training camp by Cambria in the spring of 1941. Cambria threw a halter over him in the Cuban canebrakes, bought him shoes, and presented him to Manager Bucky Harris as, of all things, "the new Walter Johnson."

ORTIZ was at least a different kind of Cuban, for Cambria's products of that island traditionally ran to watch-charm size. Not Ortiz. He was the biggest Cuban you ever did see. Bulked 210 pounds, stood 6-foot-4 with feet to match. Cambria tracked him down in one of the hinterland provinces of Cuba after Ortiz's fame as the Paul Bunyan of baseball had seeped into Havana proper.

The guy was something to look at. Big and handsome, too. And he could throw that ball. Cambria was a little vague about whether Ortiz was a better pitcher than he was a hitter. So was Bucky Harris at the outset, because Ortiz was stepping up to the plate and belting the ball over the fences in the Orlando park when he wasn't pitching.

Harris was so intrigued by the fellow, in fact, that he at first could abide Ortiz's complete ignorance of how to stand on the rubber or hold runners on base. Those things Ortiz might be taught. What impressed Harris was the fact that Ortiz actually was knocking the mitts off the panicky Jake Early and Al Evans who were catching him in batting practice.

THE NATS' catchers were excusably timid about standing in front of the wild-pitching Ortiz, who was threatening to shear their heads or shins off when he cut loose. Harris sent over to Tampa for an old friend, Al Lopez, star catcher of the Boston Braves, and asked him to tame Ortiz a bit. Lopez had the advantage of speaking Spanish, and that helped.

They let Roberto start a game against the Detroit Tigers at Tinker Field. His pitching opponent was Rookie Fred Hutchinson, purchased for $75,000 by the Tigers from the Coast League in a furious bidding fest with the Yankees and Red Sox. Ortiz, who didn't cost the Nats 75 centavos, outpitched Hutchinson all the way and helped win his own game with a triple and a homer.

But he wasn't a pitcher. He could throw hard, that was all. Harris got Ortiz aside and tried to ask him if he wanted to be an outfielder. His lack of Spanish stumped him, and he called Cambria into the conference, presuming Cambria had learned some Spanish during his frequent visits to Cuba. "Ask this guy if he wants to be an outfielder," Harris told Cambria.

IT WAS no dice. Cambria knew no more Spanish than did Harris, and Ortiz could only look blankly at the pair. Cambria's technique was to put the same questions in English that Harris had asked, only louder. Harris finally flared up and told Cambria, "Scram, bum, you can't make him understand English by yelling it louder than I did."

Eventually Ortiz did play the outfield for the Nats. He hit that long ball, but not often enough. He had the best throwing arm in the outfield, but no judgment on fly balls. When he hustled back to Cuba at word that Cubans might be drafted into the United States Army, the Nats felt no great sense of loss. Eventually he jumped to the Mexico League and later to Venezuela. He qualified for the general amnesty granted jumpers by Commissioner Chandler.

Before he quit the Nats, though, Ortiz finally won some friends among 'em. Their respect for him leaped the day he stepped into a jawing match between his Cuban pal, little Mike Guerra, and Tom Turner, big Cuban-baiting catcher of the Browns. "You no fight Mike," said Ortiz, "you fight me." So he piled into Turner and beat the daylights out of him and put Cuban ball players in a more favorable light with Washington ball players, who had been skeptical.

First-Place Cards Hand 7-3 Lacing To Phillies

St. Louis, July 27 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals took full advantage of Han Borowy's wildness to push across three runs in each of the first two innings for a 7-to-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies tonight.

Two home runs accounted for the tallies off the offerings of Cardinal Hurler Red Munger who got his ninth victory of the season.

Borowy walked five men in the first two frames and all five scored.

Buddy Blattner homered in the fourth with Bill Nicholson on base and Willie Jones hit a four-bagger in the sixth.

Walks to Red Schoendienst, Lou Klein and Enos Slaughter set up the scoring in the first inning. Ron Northey's long fly, Glenn Nelson's single and Andy Seminick's wild throw into the outfield put the runners home.

In the second Munger singled, Schoendienst and Klein walked. Stan Musial sent the trio across the plate with a long double—his eleventh hit and eighth extra-base punch in four games.

The Redbirds added their final run in the seventh when Northey doubled. Chuck Diering ran for him and took third on Nelson's single. Diering scored when Glaviano flied deep to the outfield.

The Phils threatened in the fifth on Klein's error and infield hits by Granny Hamner and Del Ennis, but with one out Seminick bounced into a double play.

The triumph kept the Cardinals a game and a half in front of the Brooklyn Dodgers in the National League race.

Dodgers Beat Chicago, 7-3

Chicago, July 27 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers' longest losing streak of the season ended at four games today as the Brooks routed the Chicago Cubs, 7-3.

Home runs by Gil Hodges and Bruce Edwards featured the Dodgers' 11-hit assault against Dutch Leonard, Warren Hacker and Bob Rush.

Hodges broke a 1-1 tie with his fourteenth homer in the fourth inning with Jackie Robinson on base. The Dodgers sewed up the game in the seventh with a three-run drive on a walk, Gene Hermanski's triple, Duke Snider's double and another two-bagger by Hodges.

Yanks, Tribe Rained Out In 4th at 4-4

New York, July 27 (AP)—A heavy downpour washed out the second of an important three-game series between the league leading New York Yankees and runner-up Cleveland Indians today.

The teams were in a 4-4 deadlock when the downpour halted hostilities after four innings of play.

A disappointed crowd of 47,596 paying customers waited hopefully in the shelter of the mammoth stadium for the skies to clear. But after one hour and 57 minutes, when the downpour showed no signs of slackening, Chief Umpire Bill McGowan officially called the game.

The washout left the Yankees still three games in front of Cleveland. No announcement was made when the game would be replayed.

The Yankees got off to a 4-0 lead in the first inning, blasting Bob Feller off the mound before he could retire a batter. Tommy Henrich, playing despite a broken toe on his right foot, produced the big wallop, a towering home run with two teammates aboard.

The Indians evened up matters in the fourth, routing Ed Lopat and filling the bases on reliefers Clarence Marshall and Joe Page before they were retired.

A double by Mickey Vernon and Larry Doby's single to right accounted for one run. Doby's steal of second, a sacrifice and Manager Lou Boudreau's long fly brought in the Cleveland center fielder.

Marshall, who took over after Doby's steal, then walked Thurman Tucker and Jim Hegan. He was replaced by Joe Page who passed Zoldak to load the bases. The Yankee relief hurler finally retired the side on Dale Mitchell's short fly to left.

The homer by Henrich with two on appeared to unnerve Feller. Bob plunked the next batter, Joe DiMaggio, in the back and walked Yogi Berra. Still there was nobody out.

Manager Lou Boudreau became convinced that Feller did not have a friend on the Yankees and called on Zoldak. Sad Sam forced Bobby Brown to hit a double play but gave up another run on Hank Bauer's single past short.

IT'S BEEN A LONG, LONG TIME—When the Nats finally ended their 11-game losing streak by stopping Detroit, 7-6, in the first game of last night's doubleheader, Manager Joe Kuhel (center), usually expressionless, couldn't restrain himself. He's breaking out with a wide grin as he congratulates winning pitcher Ray Scarborough (right). Big No. 21 moving in on the scene is Nat Pitcher Dick Welteroth. The smile faded in the second game, however, as the Nats lost, 11-0

By Herb Heft

Those Wondrous Nats

ISN'T IT AWFUL the way those wiseguy headline writers give our Nats a beating even when we win?

Even when we smash down the Tigers, 7-6, in the first game last night, our Nats still get rough treatment. Look at the banner line on this page for example.

So what if we did drop the second game, 11-0. It doesn't necessarily mean that we're starting another bad streak. It means simply that in one nine-inning game, we got all our errors, hitlessness and poor pitching out of our system.

Why don't these newspaper guys ease up and look at the good side of the ledger? Do you realize that Detroit got 32 hits off our pitchers, and still got only an even break. Our pitching was tight in the clutch.

Exemplary was the relief work of our ace Ray Scarborough in the opener. He pitched the last five innings, walked two and allowed eight hits, yet succeeded in nursing our slim lead.

Manager Joe Kuhel's standpat policy on his lineup looked awfully good. With confidence that they'll see a lot of steady action now, our boys crashed out 12 hits in the first. Notice Eddie Robinson was swatting for distance again. Three doubles off the right-field wall for Eddie. With a little less humidity to hold the ball down, they might have all been homers.

Boston's Parnell Wins 14th Beating Chisox With 3 Hits, 6-0

Boston, July 27 (AP).—Lefty Mel Parnell won his fourteenth game of the season for the Boston Red Sox and his third shutout by holding the Chicago White Sox to three hits today for a 6-0 victory.

The Red Sox lost no time in getting to Gumpert. After he walked two men in the opening inning, Vern Stephens drove in the initial tally with a single to left and Bobby Doerr's double scored the second.

Doerr's twelfth homer of the season accounted for the third run in the sixth and the Red Sox combed Gumpert for three more in the seventh.

Parnell opened with a single and came all the way home when Steve Souchock juggled Dom DiMaggio's double off the left field wall. Pesky singled Dom to third and he scored on Ted Williams' fly to George Metkovich. Bill Goodman's double scored Pesky with the third run of the frame.

Philadelphia, July 27 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics spotted the St. Louis Browns five runs in the first inning and then came from behind twice to win the second game of the twi-night doubleheader 8-6 after taking the opener 7-3. The twin victory ran the A's winning streak to five straight.

Billy Wolfe, Bolster Win In Junior Golf

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Billy Wolfe and Dennis Bolster became Washington's only contenders in the National Junior Championship at Congressional Country Club when all other local entries lost their first-round matches yesterday.

Bolster advanced to the second round at the expense of Bill Livingston, also from the District, whom he defeated 7 and 5. Bolster, 17-year-old Gonzaga High student who was the District medalist, was four over par for the thirteen holes played.

Wolfe put Elmer Berling, jr., Erlanger, Ky., out of the United States Golf Association tournament with a 2 and 1 win over the Kentucky lad. Billy carded a 38-34—72 for the round.

Bolster meets John Moynihan, Troy, N. Y., in the second round this morning, while Wolfe faces Murray Vernon, jr., Greenwich, Conn.

Hugh Reed, another Gonzaga High student, got the toughest break of the day when he turned in the fourth best round of the day, an even par, 37-34—71, only to lose to one of the tournament favorites, Graham Hunt, Overland Park, Kans., 2 and 1.

Hunt, Kansas State junior champ, turned in a two under par 69 to oust Reed. Both boys were playing stymies for the first time.

Fletcher Disappoints

The most disappointing loss came when Kay Fletcher, two up after nine holes, lost the tenth, eleventh and twelfth before halving the thirteenth and taking the fourteenth to be even with William Morrow, Shreveport, La., at that point. Morrow, the New Orleans section medalist, won the next two holes, however, to close out the match, defeating the former Panama champ now living in the District, 3 and 2.

Bob Salamy, Washington, ran up against one of the two quarter-finalists from last year who are playing this year, and lost 8 and 6 to Mason Rudolph, Clarksville, Tenn., co-medalist from the strong Louisville, Ky., section.

Billy Ball, Washington, carried his match with Peter Burkholder,

Griffs Halt String at 11 In 1st Game With Tigers

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Undismayed over the luck which divorced them from their 11-game losing streak in the opener, the Nats regained their losing touch impressively in the nightcap of last night's double-header with the Detroit Tigers.

Despite pitching which was somewhat suspect, the Nats staggered to a monumental 7-6 victory in the daylight portion of the twi-night affair, but were nosed out, 11-0, under the lights.

That the Nats' hurling featured neither portion of the two scuffles is evidenced in the box scores which show 32 hits for the Tigers, 15 in the first game which they lost and 17 in the nightcap which they won rather handily.

Hutch too Much

Fred Hutchinson, who contributed a pinch-single in a ninth inning rally which threatened to deprive the Nats of their overwhelming triumph in the first game, notched his seventh success and his fourth over Washington in the second game. It was a four-hitter.

It was his second straight shutout over the Nats in Griffith Stadium. They've gotten exactly one run off him in 27 innings in the local arena.

Although the Nats' pitching failed to excite the crowd of 9133, Centerfielder Johnny Groth deemed it a pleasure to bat against the five hurlers the Nats Wheeled in. He cracked out six hits, scored three runs and knocked in three.

Ray Scarborough limped to the one-run decision in the opener, winning it with an eight-hit, five-inning relief job after Sid Hudson had started and blown a four-run lead.

Early, Robinson Hit

Scarborough, who got credit for his eighth triumph, got unexpected help from Jake Early and later Eddie Robinson and needed to be the success he was.

Early cracked a two-run single in the fifth inning to return to the Nats a lead Scarborough almost pitched away for them in the ninth inning.

Robinson's double, one of five the Nats made off of an assortment of Detroit flingers, brought in the seventh and what proved to be the winning run in the eighth.

After relieving Hudson in the fifth, Scarborough managed to hold the Tigers scoreless until the ninth when they laced out three singles to pull within one run of the Nats. With two away and runners on first and third, Hutchinson smacked a pinch-single and the Tigers needed only one more run to tie the game.

Scarborough, however, got Don Kolloway to pop up and the 11-game Nat losing streak was history. The crowd cheered as if the Nats had just won the seventh game of the World Series and players embraced each other much in the same spirit.

The nightcap produced no cause for cheeriness, however. Joe Haynes started it and left in the third inning, bequeathing a 6-0 deficit to Lloyd Hittle. A flock of Detroit hits upped the margin to 11-0 and that's the way matters stood when Al Gettel took over in the seventh. He gave up the last three hits, but no more runs, an achievement of monumental proportions in view of what his predecessors had done.

Boudreau Decides To Bench Vernon, Play First Himself

New York, July 27 (AP).—First Baseman, Mickey Vernon probably will ride the bench during the five-game series opening at Boston Friday, Manager Lou Bourdreau of the Cleveland Indians disclosed today.

Boudreau, who has been playing third base, will move to first base and Ken Keltner will play third.

"Ken took hitting practice last night," Boudreau said, "and I'm hoping he'll be ready to go back to third base by the time we go back to Boston Friday.

"We'll stack up our right-handed hitters in Boston, just as we did last trip, except that we'll use Allie Clark instead of Dale Mitchell only when a southpaw works for the Red Sox."

Brian Bell, Jr. Joins Redskins

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

All through "shopping around," Brian Bell, jr., star halfback of Western High and Washington and Lee University, yesterday decided to cast his lot with the Washington Redskins.

Also penning his name on a Washington contract yesterday was Joe Tereshinski, stellar wingman, who has been employed by a local automobile concern during the off months.

Just two days before the local pro gridmen leave for their training camp at Occidental College, at Pasadena, Calif. Bell surprised everyone concerned with an early morning call to the Redskin office.

"Need a halfback?" he asked.

Coach John Whelchel, another Western alumnus, needed one syllable to answer. "Yes," he said, probably hoping that here was the end of his search for a "ball-packin' halfback."

When Bell's name was officially on a Redskin contract he'd made a big step toward being the only Washington high school player ever to perform with the Redskins. Now all he must do is compete against eight other halfbacks for a place on the team.

"I'm awful glad to be with this team," Bell said after the contract signing ceremony. His pleasure was matched by 'Skin officials, who'd drafted him while he was still a junior at W. and L. They knew about the stellar career in both football and baseball he enjoyed with the Generals.

The dark, 22-year-old husky, who packs 210 pounds on his 6-foot-1 frame, was All-State in both of his favorite sports in his last year at college. He was All-High at Western.

In his first interview with the 'Skins, the son of the late Associated Press editor was given an

Bobby Has 71

Locke Holds 3d Place in Irish Open

Belfast, July 27 (AP).—Bobby Locke of South Africa was one stroke back of the leaders in third place today at the end of the first round in the Irish Open Golf Championship.

Locke, who detoured here when the United States PGA banned him from competing in its tournaments, shot a 71.

Harry Bradshaw of Ireland and Flory Van Donck of Belgium shared the lead with 70. Tied with Locke were three British professionals—Sam King, Alf Padgham and E. C. Pope.

Locke beat Bradshaw in a play-off for the British Open crown July 9.

The South African star kept mum on his blacklisting by the Americans. He said he had asked for further information before deciding on an invitation to compete in a three-way match at Spokane, Wash., with Sam Snead, the U. S. PGA champion, and Cary Middlecoff, the U. S. Open king.

Locke was barred from American PGA sponsored tournaments for what the PGA said was his failure to live up to tournament and exhibition contracts.

Another 18 holes will be played here tomorrow with 36 holes on Friday. First prize is $1600.

Rosedale, Yanks Qualify to Play At Griffith Stadium

The Rosedale and Yankees 12-and-under teams are the first to gain the right to play August 12 and 13 at Griffith Stadium in the Walter Johnson Baseball School League championships.

Rosedale whipped Anacostia, 9-8, in one semifinals game at Rosedale, while the Yankees trimmed Gichenor, 10-4, at Takoma yesterday.

Sam Malach Wins Lanham Feature

Sam Malach, Lansdale, Pa., won the 20-lap stock car feature race at West Lanham Speedway last night over Frank Schneider, Lambertville, N. J.

The estimated crowd of 6000 saw a spectacular acident in one of the qualifying heats but, fortunately, neither of the Richmond, Va., drivers involved was hurt. They were Bill Gross and Hank Stanley who went sailing after their wheels locked.

D. C. Star Has Won 40 Of 48 Games

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 27 (AP).—Top-seeded Gil Bogley of Washington, D. C., continued his winning ways in the Western Junior and Boys Tennis Championships here today.

He downed Ernest DuBray of San Francisco, his fourth round opponent, 6—2, 6—2. Bogley's four foes have won a total of only eight games against 48.

Bogley and his partner, Dick Squires of Bronxville, N. Y., were also successful in the junior doubles, defeating Dwight Stocker and Andy Miller of Kalamazoo, 6—0, 6—1.

The D. C. boys doubles team of Tim Coss and Ted Rogers eliminated Jimmy Dye of Preston, Ariz., and Robert Drediger of El Paso, Tex., 6—2, 4—6, 6—2.

Three seeded players were ousted today.

Seventh-seeded Jacque Grigry was the highest ranking favorite eliminated in the Junior division. He was beaten 5—7, 6—4, 9—7 by Hamilton Richardson, who won the Western and National Boys title last year and was seeded eleventh among the Juniors his first year.

Two other favorites came through. Third-seeded Whitney Reed of Alameda, Calif., downed Jim Sagebiel of Dayton, Ohio, 6—0, 6—4, and fourth-seeded Jerry De Witts of Oakland, Calif., turned back Jim Farrell of Kalamazoo, 7—5, 9—7.

The defeated ranking players in boys' play were Joe Blatchford, Beverly Hills, Calif., seventh, and Herschel Hyde, jr., Berkeley, Calif., ninth.

Conrad Fischer of Kalamazoo edged out Blatchford, 6—8, 6—3, 6—4, and Ralph Freund of Fresno, Calif., beat out Hyde, 6—3, 6—3.

In other fourth-round matches: Top-seeded Jack Frost, Monterey, Calif., defeated Tom Wylie, Kalamazoo, 6—0, 6—1; sixth-seeded Al Kuhn, Evanston, Ill., defeated Dick Potter, Hamtramck, Mich.; eighth-seeded John Lesch, San Francisco, defeated William Cranston, San Marino, Calif., 6—4, 7—5; second-seeded Don Thompson, Jackson Heights, N. Expert Fisherwomen

Mrs. Brebner, Little Susan, 4, Need No Help From Mere Men

By Ralph Murdock

YOU'VE HEARD the old adage, "Like father, like son." Well, here's a new wrinkle, "Like mother, like daughter."

Murdock

It all happened in a rowboat and you would have to be in the same boat to appreciate it.

In fishing circles the fair sex are known to be timid souls. Their symptoms are: scared of bloodworms, taking the fish off, baiting hooks, throwing out line, untangling same, etc.

Well, there comes a time when you find one of the weaker sex who asks no angling favors on a fishing trip.

Believe it or not, there is a gal who cuts up worms, takes her fish off the line, baits her own hooks, casts her own line (and how) and passes out sandwiches and fried chicken which she had prepared in anticipation of the outing.

Now for the qualifications of the daughter, little Susan, who will be four years old on September 19. She daintily holds her light steel rod like a doll baby and really knows how to wind a fish into the boat. The little tot has acquired the patience of an experienced fisherman, which is the top qualification of a good angler and only stops fishing at intervals for a soothing marshmallow. She brought her teddy bear along in case the fishing was dull. But there were no dull moments because 79 spot and 4 hardheads were caught.

Incidentally, the husband and father, Jimmy Brebner, of the Manhattan Laundry, was on the trip. The reason—they needed some one to carry and operate their Martin "60" outboard. Wife Mary Brebner caught the most fish and Susan hauled in six spot which included a double header. The trio used fresh water equipment.

JOHN SNELL, Frank Frazier, A. R. Shepherd, P. C. Miller, Durant Dean and Bill Roman fished at Cornfield Harbor, on the lower Potomac, with Captain Scheibel and caught 25 hardheads, 45 spot and 22 perch. Snell, the spokesman for the anglers said that two other parties that fished from the same spot caught 58 hardheads on one boat and 62 trout on the other. This location has produced the most trout in the current angling season.

HERE ARE SEVERAL parties that enjoyed good fishing off Holland Point. George Minton and party, 30 hardheads; Sam Wertz and party, 50 hardheads; John Trailes and party, 38 hardheads. Seven fisherman from the Indian Embassy took 75 fish, mostly spot, near the same location. The majority of the croakers were taken in shoal water.

SERGT. GRANT (Curley) Goodrich, an ardent angler stationed at Bolling Field, received his orders to report to Germany, and it looked like no more fishing for the "top kick" in the good old U. S. A. His wife, Irene, accidentally slipped on the wet lawn and broke her leg. An additional 60 days was granted the sergeant. In the interim Irene had a birthday. To celebrate the occasion a fishing trip was hastily organized. Capt. Winston L. Jones completed the quartet of anglers. One bluefish and 40 hardheads and spot was the catch. Curley caught the most fish. Irene was second.

EIGHT WASHINGTONIANS, C. N. Stitt, John Harris, George McCarty, Frank Samuels, Milton Clark, Clarence Raezer, Daniel Cameron, Jerome E. Jones and Thelma Hammack, 14-year-old girl from Knoxville, Tenn., had a banner fishing trip at Lewes, Del., when they boated 408 black sea bass and flounders. The latter represented the bulk of the catch. The "champ" flounder was a six-pound specimen. The bait was squid and clams. They fished 30 miles from shore.

Weekend Fishing Suggestions

HARDHEADS—Shoal water—4 to 20-foot depths. Upper bay from Breezy Point to Shadyhide. Evening reported best, catches up to 50 reported.

SPOT—From Point Lookout to Annapolis. This species plentiful. Select shell bottoms for best results with bloodworms for bait.

ROCKFISH—Eastern bay area and mouth of Chester River. Chumming is our choice method.

TROUT — Cornfield Harbor, near the mouth of the Potomac, is our best bet. Also mouth of Patuxent at Solomons Island.

Sugar Ray-Belloise Fight Aug. 24 in Yankee Stadium

New York, July 27 (AP).—Ray Robinson, world welterweight champion, and Steve Belloise, one of the main contenders for middleweight honors, agreed to terms today for a 10-round bout in Yankee Stadium on August 24.

They will fight at 160 pounds or less.

The fight follows by two weeks the Ezzard Charles-Gus Lesnevich bout for the N.B.A. world heavyweight title in Yankee Stadium and precedes the September 14 outdoor meeting of Rocky Graziano and Charles Fusari, both middleweights.

All three bouts are being promoted by the International Boxing Club of which Jim Norris of Detroit, is president.

Cameo Has Chance to Tie Today

The Heurich Brewers defeated Sunnybrook, 8-7, yesterday on the Ellipse, completing the second-half of the Washington Post-Industrial League with a 10 won, 2 lost record.

Heurich is perched atop the league standings, but Cameo Furniture, who plays Naiman's today has a 9 and 2 record. A victory for Cameo will necessitate a playoff for the second half championship.

Yesterday's hero was Heurich Outfielder Bill Francis, whose double in the eighth inning scored two runs and tied the game up. Heurich went on to win in the ninth on a single and an error.

Braves Win in 13th on Homer; Giants Whip Pirates, 8-3

Rickert's Blow Beats Reds, 9-7

Cincinnati, July 27 (AP).—The Boston Braves had to travel 13 innings today to subdue the seventh-place Cincinnati Reds, 9-7, and it was Marv Rickert's two-run homer in the fourth extra frame that won the game.

Bud Lively, the fourth Cincinnati pitcher and the loser, held the Braves to one hit from the ninth to the thirteenth frame. After two were out, he walked Eddie Stanky and Rickert promptly lined one into the right-field stands.

Glen Elliott, who took over the Boston pitching in the ninth, was in trouble frequently but managed to squeeze through for his third victory against one defeat.

Higbe's Relief Job Wins for New York

Pittsburgh, July 27 (AP). — New York's Giants evaded sixth place in the National League standings today by defeating Pittsburgh, 8 to 3, on the fine relief pitching of Kirby Higbe, recently acquired from the Pirates.

Higbe took over the hurling from Starter Clint Hartung in the fifth inning and gave up only four hits the remainder of the way.

The Giants moved out in front in the seventh when four singles, Sid Gordon's double and Wes Westrum's home run with two mates on base meant five runs.

During the barrage Monte Bascall, Pirate second baseman, was hit in the face when a batted ball took a bad hop and he was forced to retire.

Riddell Ousts Stranahan

Saint John, New Brunswick, July 27 (AP).—Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, the defending champion, was pushed out of the Canadian Amateur Golf Tournament today by tiny Tommy Riddell of Quebec, one up in 19 holes.

Riddell, whose triumph brought a rousing cheer from the 600 galleryites, sank a 30-inch putt on the first extra hole to win the fourth round match. Meanwhile, Stranahan was short with his second, chipped to 9 feet of the pin with his third and missed the putt.

Even at the turn, Riddell was 2 up on Stranahan at the fifteenth tee. He lost that hole and the next to permit Stranahan to even the count. The little Canadian missed a chance to close out the match on the eighteenth when his 15-foot putt curled around the cup.

The defeat of Stranahan, who won his morning round 6 and 5 from Nip Ross of Sydney, Nova Scotia, left only one American for the quarter-finals.

Dick Chapman of Pinehurst, N. C., scored an easy 6 and 4 victory over Vernon Mons of Edmonton, Alta., in the afternoon round today. In the morning he won 4 and 2 from Doug Bajus of Vancouver.

Long Hospitalized

Vince Dundee Former Ring Champ, Dies

Glendale, Calif., July 27 (AP).—Vince Dundee, one-time world middleweight champion, died today after a seven-year stay in a hospital. He was 41.

Sanitarium officials said death was due to multiple sclerosis. He had entered the hospital in 1942 for treatment of a blocked nerve at the base of his brain.

The nerve condition led to a progressive paralysis that made him virtually helpless during his final years.

Dundee, born in Italy as Vincent Lazzaro, won the middleweight title by defeating Lou Brouillard in Boston in 1933 and lost it the following year to Teddy Yarosz in Pittsburgh.

His brief reign as king of the 160-pounders and brother Joe's stay on the welterweight throne from 1927 to 1929 made the two probably the only brothers ever to hold world boxing championships.

In all, four Dundee brothers fought in the ring. After the family came to the United States it lived for a time in Baltimore and it was there that they started their fistic careers.

Probably the most sensational bout of Vince's career was with Freddie Steele in Seattle on July 7, 1935. Steele, who later became the middleweight champion, floored Dundee eleven times before the bout was halted in the third round. Dundee suffered a broken jaw and a brain concussion.

Four days later the mauling Italian announced his retirement but in 1937 he started a comback that was climaxed by a loss to Billy Conn of Pittsburgh later that same year. He fought twice more and then retired for good.

Scandinavia Dominates in Early Events

Oslo, Norway, July 27 (AP).—A strong United States track and field squad trailed Scandinavia, 102½ to 78½, tonight after the first of three nights of competition in the "Little Olympics."

The Americans still are favored to win the meet, however, since the opening program was loaded with Scandinavia's best events.

The home squad swept the first three places in the javelin throw, hop step and jump, marathon and 1500-meter run.

Curtis Stone of State College, Pa., surprised the capacity crowd of 35,000 by finishing second in the 3000-meter steeplechase that was figured to be another sweep for the Nordic distance aces.

Andy Stanfield of Seton Hall College and Dick Ault of the University of Missouri scored the most impressive victories. Stanfield breezed through the 100 meter dash in 10.3 seconds, followed by Charles Peters of the University of Indiana and Harrison Dillar of Cleveland.

Ault won the 400 meter hurdles in 51.8 seconds, closely pressed by Ronald Fraser of Southern California. Rune Larson of Scandinavia was third.

The only event in which the Americans failed to live up to expectations was the high jump. Arne Aahman of Scandinavia, who also won the hop step and jump, cleared 6 feet 6 61/64 inches in his first try and none of the three Americans could come within an inch of it. Dick Phillips of Brown, John Heintzman of Bradley and Irv Mondschien of New York University all cleared 6 feet 5 25/32 inches.

Of the nine events on the opening program, Scandinavia won six. The other American victory was in the 1600 meter relay where Frank Fox, Seton Hall; Hugh Maiocco, New York University; Dave Bolen of Boulder, Colo., and Mal Whitfield of Ohio State combined to turn in a good time of 3:11.4.

Each squad is permitted three entries in each event. Points are scored seven, five, four, three, two and one. In relays, the winning team gets five points and the other team three.

offer, but then told to look around a bit before signing. He talked baseball with the Philadelphia Phils, whose training camp he'll attend next spring, and he talked football with the New York Yankees of the All-American Conference.

Plays at Home

After working his way to South America on a cruise, Bell decided to accept Redskin terms. These were not divulged, but Bell gave his best reason for joining the D. C. eleven.

"It'll be great to play at home again," he said.

For Tereshinski, a 214-pounder from Georgia, this will be the third year in professional ranks. He came to Washington in 1947 and quickly made a name for his rough-and-ready style of play.

Only two players—Guard John Badeczewski and Halfback Eddie Saenz—have failed to accept Redskin terms for '49. Badeczewski was obtained in a recent trade with the Chicago Cardinals. Saenz is expected to sign on the West Coast, where he has been attending Southern California in the off season.

Clark Dies at 75, Olympic Champ

Hingham, Mass, July 27 (AP)—Famed former Olympic champion Ellery Harding Clark, 75, died today on a South Shore train while en route to Boston from his home at Cohasset.

Clark won the high and broad jump in 1896 at the Olympic Games in Athens, Greece. He had been a member of the Harvard track team four years.

Star Juvenile Destroyed In Race Debut

New York, July 27 (AP).—Air Lift, a full brother of the 1946 Triple Crown winner Assault, from Robert J. Kleberg's King Ranch Stable, had to be destroyed after breaking his left ankle in his debut on today's Saratoga-at-Jamaica program.

The two-year-old chestnut colt, a son of Bold Venture-Igual, bred by his Texas owner, apparently stepped in a hole near the three-eighths pole, according to Jockey Dave Gorman. The track veterinarian recommended that the highly regarded youngster be destroyed. This was not done until Kleberg and Trainer Max Hirsch were contacted at the Keeneland sales in Kentucky.

Air Lift was nominated for five of six juvenile stakes at the Saratoga meeting opening next Monday at the up-State course. The colt, in his first outing today, was a close second choice to the ineffectual Ceara, at $2.40 to $1 in the 5½-furlong sixth event.

Air Lift broke well, moved into third position on the outside, then was seen to falter suddenly in suffering a compound fracture to his ankle.

Air Lift's fatal injury recalled the early ends to juvenile careers of two other highly esteemed juveniles on New York tracks in the past. Manhasset Stable's Thingumabob, in a race at Saratoga, and Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Skylarking, which broke down at Belmont Park, were rated possible champions at the time of their deaths. However, they had proved their ability in racing prior to their fatal injuries.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are considering residence in Texas, when they return here from France—the duke to a ranch near Dallas, where he could utilize his ranch-operating knowledge, and the duchess to a post with Nieman-Marcus . . . Abdullah of Transjordan, one of the leaders in the war against Israel, will arrive in London shortly. Our State Department has been notified that Abdullah's consultations in England will be with doctors, and that his illness is the only reason for the trip . . . Dan Golenpaul's suit vs. WOR, over "Information Please," was settled out of court. He received $50,000.

Eleanor Roosevelt and her literary agent, George Bye, have had a disagreement involving her switch to McCall's, and litigation may result . . . Decca Records will invade the long-playing record field in the fall . . . Governor Munoz-Marin of Puerto Rico toured the kitchen at the Hotel Plaza, where most of the kitchen help are Puerto Ricans. "This place," said the Governor, "is bigger than the Department of Labor in Puerto Rico" . . . Phil Barry's "Philadelphia Story" never has been performed in England. The author saw Sarah Churchill do it in summer stock last week, and will consent to her playing in it in London.

When Eric Johnston went to Russia last and conferred with Stalin and the Soviet movie heads, he succeeded in getting an arrangement whereby the Soviet Union will select and release 20 American-made movies, and in return pay one million dollars gold in New York. The synopses of 100 movies were submitted to the Soviets, who expressed interest in 24 of them. These 24 movies recently were sent to Russia, and last week they were being shown to officials in Moscow, who will make the selections of the final 20 . . . They voted "No" on a Marx Brothers movie, and "Yes" on "State Fair" and "Going My Way," in which Bing Crosby plays a Catholic priest.

Jascha Heifetz, Arthur Rubinstein and Gregor Piatagorsky, who will appear together in a series of concerts in Chicago, all will receive honorary doctor of music degrees from Northwestern University . . . Jurors at the Alger Hiss trial weren't aware that Whittaker Chambers was testifying under subpena. They spent time arguing over the reasons which might have prompted Chambers to volunteer his testimony, and didn't know he had to testify because of the subpena. . . . Ed Wynn refused an offer to buy a farm at a bargain rate. "I once tried farming, and it's too expensive," he explained. "Every radish I ever pulled up seemed to have a mortgage attached to it."

What About Bullying?

Bullying is not an acceptable kind of behavior to most of us. We dislike the person, child or adult, who "picks on" those who aren't able to defend themselves. We stand up for those who are being bullied, if we can, and feel no sympathy for the bully himself.

Yet, in a very real sense, the bully is the one who most needs understanding and help. He is likely to have feelings of inferiority, to be unsure of himself and, therefore, to try to make up for these feelings by pushing others around.

One parent handled the neighborhood bully in a most effective way. Instead of complaining to his parents or forbidding him to play with her children, she showed a very friendly attitude, invited him over for good times with other neighborhood youngsters and in other ways helped him to get a sense of belonging.

Such a technique is likely to work well even with adult bullies, though sometimes a good deal of patience is needed. If the friendly approach is tried long enough to convince the bully that he is an acceptable sort of person, there are few cases in which results won't be positive.

Lack of a phone was no problem to a man who thought the piano Harold Mitchell offered for sale in the Classified section of a Bremerton (Wash.) newspaper might be just what his church needed. He used his amateur radio set to get a message to Mitchell to hold the piano until a church committee could inspect it.

Classified Advertising's popularity stems from Result-Action embracing every conceivable kind of personal and commercial need.

As far as we know, no one radioed Mrs. E. L. of Massachusetts Ave. to hold her piano for inspection. But a Post reader, using a telephone, made an appointment—and bought the piano—the first day the ad appeared.

There are times when a telephone call works wonders. Any Post advertiser will testify to that. For instance, you can phone in your Post ad and charge it. Call NAtional 4200 and ask for an ad writer.

The convention will end Saturday with election of a new department commander, five department vice commanders and delegates and alternates to represent the department at the national convention in Philadelphia August 29 to September 1.

Featuring the opening program tonight will be a memorial service by the Fort Stevens Post ritual team.

Fast-Talking Man Arrested

A Washington man with a record of arrests on gambling and confidence charges was trapped by Prince Georges County police yesterday as he was trying to talk a Colmar Manor, Md., woman into investing $9000 in North Carolina oil leases.

The arrested man is Charles Reese Warde, 54. He told police his address was 1935 Park rd. nw. Identity of the Colmar Manor woman was withheld by police.

Her complaint that Warde was urging her to invest in oil leases brought Prince Georges County detectives Earl J. Huber and Richard A. Pearson out to her home this morning to lay a trap for Warde.

After listening to a conversation in which the woman was promised 10 per cent profits tax free, Huber came down from upstairs, where he was hiding and made the arrest. Warde was held at Hyattsville jail in $2500 bail pending a hearing in Hyattsville Police Court August 4.

He was charged with attempted larceny by trick.

Investigation revealed, according to county police, that Warde served 13 months in 1947-48, on a gambling conviction resulting from a raid on the Trojan Club, 1745 Massachusetts ave. nw. He was reportedly part-owner of the plush casino.

His record, police said, also revealed arrests on confidence charges in Alexandria, Washington, Front Royal, Va., and New Haven, Conn. After his parole from Lorton Reformatory last year, Warde testified before the special grand jury investigating gambling in Washington.

Rep. Bolton to Britain

Representative Frances P. Bolton (R., Ohio) announced yesterday she will sail for England today "for a short trip on business for the House Foreign Affairs Committee," of which she is a member.

The nature of the business, Mrs. Bolton said, cannot be disclosed at this time, but will be upon her return.

Do you take as good care of your bicycle as your Dad does of his car? It's a lot easier if you ride a bike which is in good running order. It not only is a pleasure to have a bicycle that is in good running condition, but what is more important, it is a great deal safer.

Your bicycle is a complicated machine which should not be taken apart uless you are expert enough to perform the job. FOR ALL MAJOR REPAIRS YOU SHOULD SEE YOUR BICYCLE REPAIR MAN. Let him adjust the brakes, replace broken spokes or other worn parts.

You can keep your bike properly oiled, the pedals, handlebars, grips and saddle bars tight yourself. Tires should be checked every week or so, and kept at the pressure shown on the side wall. Be proud of your bike, take care of it, and always ride with caution.

What's the Verdict?

ACCRUED DIVIDEND

Q. An elderly man owned some shares of preferred stock which usually paid a 10 per cent dividend. One year the company failed to pay any dividend although a good profit was made, because the directors wanted to put the profit back into the business. Conditions made it inadvisable to make the planned improvements so the money was kept in reserve. The next year the dividend payment was resumed, but the stockholder claims he is entitled to a dividend for the "skipped" year as well as for the current year and wants it because, being unable to work, he needs the money. Does he get it?

A. The rights of stockholders vary greatly, just as the rights of the parties to any kind of contract vary with the terms of the contract. A preferred stockholder gets money ahead of a common stockholder. But in the usual arrangement, if a dividend is passed over and the money applied to the business, or for reasons deemed prudent by the directors is put in the reserve, even the preferred stockholder has no claim at a later date for the "skipped" dividend. Some stock is cumulative, meaning that missed dividends accrue, but in the instant case the stock is not cumulative preferred. So the elderly stockholder here would have no claim for a dividend for a "skipped" year except in the few States which follow a New Jersey rule giving such stock a preference in a reserve fund created by passed-over dividends.—F.L.D.

Father of the Bride

The Supreme Moment Finally Arrives— And Mr. Banks Mumbles His Only Line

This is the twelfth of 14 installments of that popular saga of the forgotten man, "Father of the Bride." This condensed version of Edward Streeter's novel chronicles the story of Mr. Stanley Banks as he watches the rise of the greatest show on earth (his daughter's wedding) and the fall of his bank account.

By Edward Streeter

Illustrated by Gluyas Williams

MR. BANKS sat uneasily in the rear of the black limousine. Beside this lovely, calm stranger he felt small and a bit ridiculous. Their ages had somehow been mysteriously reversed. Instead of being the father of the bride he was a small boy being taken to dancing school in an asinine costume.

A neatly framed card on the back of the chauffeur's partition caught his eye. "The driver of this car is Mr. Pomus. He is Careful—Courteous—Cooperative."

They rounded a corner into Red Brook Road. Far down its leafy vista Mr. Banks caught a glimpse of the striped awning in front of St. George's. Considerably nearer, however, was the father of all moving vans. A veritable freight car of a vehicle. It was backed against the curb and completely blocked the street.

Mr. Pomus thrust his white locks through the window. "We want to get by," he said gently.

The driver eyed him impersonally. "Hold yer glasses on, gran'pa. Don't let yourself get sweated up."

Mr. Pomus' face took on the ethereal look of a saint about to be martyred. "I'm telling you to pull that God-damn crate out of the way an' lemme get the hell by," he said with unexpected firmness.

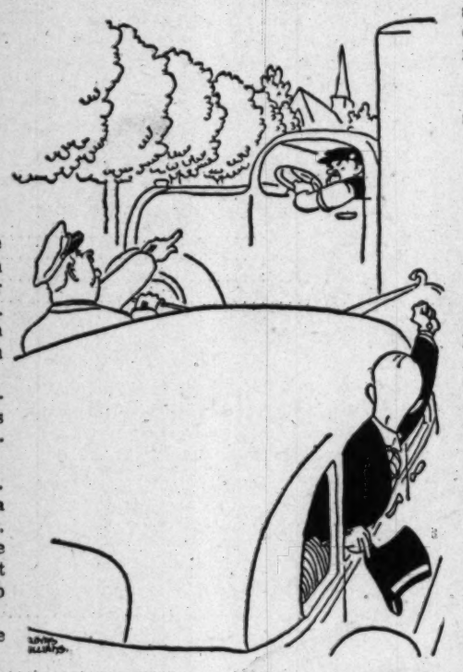
"Yeah? You an' who?"

Mr. Pomus opened the door quietly and half stood on the running board. From his lips there poured, without warning, a torrent of electric invective. It contained many words which Mr. Banks had not heard since World War I. He stared at Mr. Pomus in dismay. Then something long dormant within him was touched into life.

Lowering the rear window and carefully removing his high hat, he stuck his head out and joined Mr. Pomus, adding a number of words that the latter seemed to have forgotten. For the first time that day he felt like himself. He also felt Kay tugging at his coattails.

The driver descended from his cab and approached them. He noticed Kay and stopped. "Whyn't you tell me you was on yer way to a wedding? Jesus, what's bitin' people these days?"

He climbed back into his cab and stepped on the starter. Mr. Banks looked at his watch. It was 23 minutes past 4 as they drew up to the curb in front of St. George's. He alighted, helped his daughter from the car.



He joined Mr. Pomus, adding a number of words that the latter seemed to have forgotten

She smiled up at him and took his arm. "You were wonderful, Pops."

Mr. Tringle Pushes the Button

MR. TRINGLE, radiating efficiency, was waiting for them at the top of the stone steps. "This way," he said and dove into a small passage.

They were in some sort of vestibule. The bridesmaids were there and a few of the ushers.

Everyone seemed to know just what was going on except Mr. Banks. It was incredible that such complex details should be falling into place without his supervision. He almost resented it. With a dramatic flourish Mr. Tringle threw open the double doors that led into the church.

The remaining ushers fell into line. Mr. Tringle stood beside the leaders. "Ready?" he asked. No one gave the slightest indication as to whether he was or not. Mr. Tringle pushed a small button on the wall.

The Supreme Moment

THIS WAS the supreme moment—the moment Mr. Banks had dreaded and anticipated for so many weeks. Now that it was here, he was serenely calm. It was not an ordinary, workday calm, however, but rather one of detached unreality.

Although he had been in St. George's many times before it was as strange to him at this instant as a Byzantine mosque.

Even the girl beside him was a stranger. She was no longer his little daughter, but a beautiful, serene woman into whom all wisdom had suddenly and mysteriously flowed. She stood, poised on the threshold of her greatest adventure, her face lit with understanding and confidence.

"O. K. with the right foot," hissed Mr. Tringle. "Right foot I said." Mr. Banks shifted quickly. Everyone else changed step at the same moment and he had to shift back again. Good God, was this a wedding march or a minuet? The procession passed through the oak doorway into the church.

He saw Buckley and the best man waiting for them at the end of the aisle. Mr. Galsworthy stood on the chancel steps smiling ever so slightly.

"Who Giveth This Woman——"

WHEN Mr. Galsworthy reached the place where he asked, "Who giveth this woman—?" Mr. Banks was to say, "I do." It was his only line in the show. He wanted to acquit himself creditably and began to consider his delivery.

Should he say, "I do" or "I do"? "I do sounded silly. It implied that any number of people might do it and that he was pushing himself forward for the job.

On the other hand, "I do" didn't make much sense either. It certainly wasn't the proper way to answer a general question.

It all struck Mr. Banks as lacking in forthrightness. Obviously, however, this was an inappropriate time to suggest revision of the marriage service, so he decided on "I do." His next problem was the tone of voice to be used.

He didn't want to mumble it in a shamefaced kind of way. On the other hand, if he boomed it out it would have an eager-beaver quality suggesting that he was delighted to get Kay off his hands. He compromised on a well-modulated, dignified delivery; about the tone a man would use if someone asked who would volunteer for a dangerous mission.

He was mindful of the fact that, when his one line had been spoken, his final part played, he was supposed to drop back a step, turn on his heel, and join his wife in the front pew. He had an unpleasant vision of stepping back and tripping over something unexpected. He began to reach behind him stealthily with his right foot, using it like the antenna of an insect.

"Who giveth this woman—?" intoned the rich baritone of the Reverend Mr. Galsworthy from far above him.

It caught him off guard in spite of all precautions. Kay nudged him and placed her hand in his. "I do," he murmured almost inaudibly, and passed her hand to Buckley. As he performed the simple act he was conscious that something deep within ripped slightly.

It's All Over

HE DID not see the rest. Turning slowly, he stared defiantly at the row of faces, then entered the first pew and stood beside Mrs. Banks. He tried in vain to listen to the words of the service—and then suddenly it was all over.

Kay and Buckley were kissing. The organ had broken into the joyous notes of the Mendelssohn Wedding March, like a little boy released from Sunday school into spring sunshine.

Kay beamed at them happily as she went by, her arm through Buckley's, and again Mr. Banks felt that queer little rending in the center of his being.

A wedding was like the experimental explosion of an atom bomb, thought Mr. Banks as he walked out behind his wife, smirking to right and left. You made the most careful preparations for months, then someone like Mr. Tringle pressed a button—and it was all over.

"Stanley, your hat looks like a cat in a thunderstorm," said Mrs. Banks as they descended the entrance steps of the church. "But it was lovely, darling, wasn't it?"

Mary Margaret adjusts her veil with one hand as she holds on to her bridal bouquet with the other while Daddy Ellsworth prepares for his role in the wedding performance

WHEN I WAS . . . . Father of the Bride

By Rep. Harris Ellsworth

Representative Harris Ellsworth of Oregon has a big role to play in Congress representing the people of the Fourth Congressional District of his State. But when daughter Mary Margaret became Mrs. Donald J. Dittman, he, as all fathers, was just a bit player

I NEVER have decided whether it was fortunate or otherwise that I knew so little about the social custom known as a "wedding" when my daughter, Mary Margaret, and Donald J. Dittman were married last year. You see, I have not attended many weddings, and prior to the event in my own family, had not seen a wedding ceremony for years.

Perhaps if I had known more about it, my part in the event could have been carried off with a little more assurance and aplomb—or whatever it is along that line that the father of the bride should have for the occasion. Possessed of knowledge, if not experience, I am sure I could also have enjoyed more the intricate detail and beauty of such an occasion.

On the other hand, it was all new to me—and exciting. I actually enjoyed the wedding immensely, particularly when it dawned upon me just how unimportant and unnoticed the father of the bride is.

IN A WAY my role seemed to be that of a rather overdressed spectator. I took no part in the planning and preparations during the weeks preceding the event. All I had to do was ride in the automobile to the church with my daughter—which I would have done anyway. Then all I did was walk down the aisle with her—and take my seat near the front of the church—which I might have done at any other wedding. At the reception I was barred from the receiving line and had a whale of a good time wandering around greeting the guests.

The one thing I shall always remember about the wedding of Mary Margaret and Don was the utter and complete naturalness and calm displayed by Mary Margaret at all times. She was the only person in the whole party, including me, who was totally and completely unexcited and unflustered. It was wonderful to watch her.

What has been found from experience to be the best way of marking clothing to be taken away to school or camp—hand-sewn tapes or indelible ink?
L. G. H.

Because hand-sewn tapes do eventually break loose, I feel the best way to mark children's clothes is by ink right on the garment.

I would like your advice on finishing or treating of two wooden bowls. One is a regular chopping bowl which, when washed, lost all of its waxed finish and became very rough and ragged on the inside. I sanded it down and then applied salad oil to the inside. Is there anything else to be done to it? The other is a large bowl that someone fashioned for me. I know it needs sanding down, but would like to know what other way it should be treated as I would like to use it as a salad bowl and food platter. Also, how to finish the outside of this bowl? It seems to be made of a fairly soft wood. S. F. G.

There is on the market a penetrating type of sealer which can be applied to both bowls to seal the wood and give a more durable surface. One of these products is applied with a brush and the surface is wiped immediately while wet with a cloth to completely remove the sealer from the surface. Another product of this type is applied, allowed to dry and the surface is rubbed with steel wool.

The bowl to which you have applied salad oil should be thoroughly wiped with a pure denatured alcohol to remove as much of the oil as possible before applying the sealer. When clean, make two applications of sealer.

The large bowl should be sanded until smooth and two coats of the sealer applied to both inside and outside.

To get long time, satisfactory wear from both bowls, they should not be allowed to stand with salad oil or water in them and should be rinsed and completely dried as soon as they are used. Also, wood bowls should be stored when not in use where they will stand straight and not be subjected to moisture.

Can you tell me if there is some preparation which can be used on a stationary laundry tub to stop a small leak from a crack? R. S. M.

Widen the crack with a screwdriver or metal file to make a groove into which a patch can be pressed. When opened and clean, pack the groove with string which has been smeared with white lead paste. If the crack is too small to pack with string, make a paste of litharge and glycerine and rub it into the crack.

THE Costa Rican Ambassador and Senora de Esquivel entertained at a concert last evening in the cool, tree-shaded setting of the Pan American Union garden.

Guests entered the garden by the pebbled walk on the south side, where roses are in full bloom against a background of boxwood. Col. George Howard, director of the Air Force Band and members of the orchestra played from a stage of three elevations which made it possible to see the musicians from any spot in the garden. From the tall windows of the Pan American Union were draped clusters of the flags of the Americas with a large flag of Costa Rica floating its red, white and blue from the center balcony.

All Chiefs of Mission of the Latin American Diplomatic Corps and their wives were invited to the musicale and informal reception which followed. Delegates to the OAS and their wives were also included as well as a large number from the Senate and the House.

The Baroness Is Delighted

Sold on Ease and Results Of Ida Jean Kain's Diet, Guest Tries for Four More

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

Baroness Constantine Stackelberg, who writes a guest column for Mary Van Renssalaer Thayer today, is a former Oregon girl who lived in Shanghai, China, for 10 years, has lectured on the Far East throughout the United States and Canada, and is proud as punch of her achievement in losing six pounds to date on the Kain diet. She plans to stay on "four pounds longer," says it's the only reducing routine she knows that doesn't leave you feeling hungry and a trifle faint. She and the Baron used to make their home in Spain and spend much time in side junkets through Europe, but now they've settled down in a Columbia rd. apartment and have a 2½-year-old son, Sandy. She blames advancing weight on the joys of motherhood and domesticity, but feels it's nothing to worry about as long as Kain diets keep appearing in The Washington Post.

DEAR MOLLY:

Anybody who can fly out of Washington to anywhere, with or without skinks, is lucky. How I envy you taking off to mountainous, waterous, cool Scandinavia. But, don't you dare undo all your dieting by going overboard for smorgasbord!

On Monday I saw our ever-youthful Vice President at lunch at Leslie Biffle's. He was so full of pep I inquired if he, too, were on Ida Jean Kain's diet. He denied that, and said he'd flown in at midnight from a one-day trip to Minneapolis where he and Bob Hope had been on a radio program . . . a hot, rushed air trip like that in my lecturing days would have left me laid out.

When I said you'd flown to Denmark with skinks, he quipped: "Are you sure you pronounced that right?"

As for my diet, I got along all right at this particular luncheon because they served thinly sliced turkey, and a mammoth salad without dressing. Other gents there who definitely don't need to diet were sartorially perfect Senator Scott Lucas, Clinton Anderson, Lyndon Johnson, J. W. Fulbright, and Theodore Green . . . I can't say the same about Senator Knowland.

I took off for New York after having been on the diet for four days and miraculously losing four pounds (It's the first diet I've ever been on that doesn't leave one hungry.)

While in New York I saw a pal who had just been to one of the swankier reduceries for two weeks. She lost eight pounds, and it cost her $1200. I figure that's $150 per pound. At that rate I owe you and Ida Jean Kain $600 for making me go on it, and a little more because our grocery bill went down.

When the 10-day stretch is over, I'm going to keep right on, because I feel 100 per cent better. Besides, Peggy Preston says the skirts will be slim this fall, and I want to slither into one of those $29.50 American copies of a $600 Dior gown.

Yours,
GARNETT.

Eat to Beat the Heat . . . and Take Off Pounds

Now Keep That Slim, Youthful Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE is a quaint way of stating age as, so many summers . . . counting just the sunny days. Time may be passing, but it is also arriving.

When the doctors asks about age, he, of course, wants the winters included, too, so he can compare chronological age with physical age. The two are not necessarily the same.

If there is a secret of staying young, and I, for one, hopefully believe there is, it is in choosing the keeping-young foods, avoiding the burden of excess weight, and above all, discarding the mental furrows in favor of constructive philosophy.

The summer series and special diet are over. If you will carry on with the pattern of protective eating, you can banish the burden of excess weight and grow younger this summer.

IDA JEAN KAIN

SKEPTICAL? Science promises that the vital organs are capable of lasting a hundred years, and that we have an excellent chance of advancing vigorously into the seventies and eighties, if the proper materials are provided. The most wonderful thing about the human machine is that, given the essential nutrients in the foods eaten, the body can repair itself.

Calcium and phosphorus are the materials needed to nourish bones, blood and tissue. Milk, cheese and green leafy vegetables are the high test foods for those materials. Iron, another important mineral needed to build blood, is furnished in eggs, lean meat, liver and green vegetables. Protein, which restores tissues by supplying materials that make good the daily wear and tear, is supplied in lean meat, fish and fowl, eggs, milk and cheese.

The reason we hear so much about the "fat forties" is this: In middle age, the internal machinery slows down. Less fuel is used, but the same protective material is required. With poor food habits, it's just the other way around—the fattening foods are included but the protection omitted.

A scientific reducing diet is a keeping young diet—all the protective nutrients are provided in abundance. Don't slip back into the old, fattening ways that step up the rate of aging.

Here is the basic list of foods by which you can plan your own reducing diet—and stay young:

Skim milk or buttermilk—1 pint
Or 1 ounce of yellow cheese and 1 glass of milk
Eggs—1 or 2
Fruits—1 citrus. 1 other.
Vegetables—1 dark green leafy. 2 others.
Meat (lean), fish or fowl—4 to 6 ounces
Bread (wholegrain or enriched)—3 thin slices
Or cereal and 1 slice of bread
Butter or margarine—2 pats
Water—6 glasses a day
1 multiple vitamin concentrate if diet is extended.

Hirschhorns to Live in Arlington

Miss Ruth Lochke Ricketts of Washington, daughter of Mrs. George M. Ricketts of Anoka, Minn., was married July 6 to Lionel Wesley Hirschhorn of Washington in the Congregational Church in Anoka. Mr. Hirschhorn is the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Clarence G. Witt.

The bride wore a gown of rose blush satin with off-shoulder neckline and lace inserts on the bodice. The skirt pleated at the back fell into a court train. Her pink net veil was gathered into a net bandeau and she carried white roses and stephanotis.

A reception in the church parlor followed the ceremony, after which Mr. Hirschhorn and his bride left for a trip to the west coast, visiting Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco, Juarez, Mexico; the Grand Canyon and Kansas City. They will be at home after August 1 at 4240 2d rd., Arlington, Va.

The bride joined the Wac in 1943 and was discharged in 1946 with the rank of lieutenant. She was formerly with the Veterans Administration in Atlanta, Ga., and is now with the central office in Washington. The bridegroom is with the office of Chief Signal Officer and military intelligence research analyst. During the war he served as radar technician and as a radio instructor with the American Mission for Aid to Greece.

Your Baby and Mine

Toddler Must Have Own Things To Learn Respect for Yours

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

You discover, as do all mothers, that when your baby begins to run about, you have to compromise with your desire for company neatness and with the baby's desire for liberty.

If you want your living room to look like a picture in a magazine, then the baby has to have some other room in which to play. If he must play in the living room, then it has to be accommodated to the baby's natural, investigative behavior.

Put away all the nontouchable ornaments, or store them on the mantel shelf while baby is about. Too many objects which can't be touched merely complicate your task of teaching the baby what is yours and what is his.

Clear the lower book shelf and put on it baby's toys, his paper-covered books, the old magazines he can tear or cut up at will. He'll be much more respectful of your books and your magazines if it is plain that right on the same kind of shelf are many of his.

Do the same with one drawer in the desk. Have it full of those odds and ends children love to take out and put back and which are not strictly toys. Empty boxes will go there, of course, large rough stones or pebbles, too massive to swallow; baby's old shoes or old bonnets, a ruler, some empty spools strung on cord, a wooden cigar box, a heavy cold cream jar with a screw lid.

These and many more objects will be treasures which the child rediscovers daily. Let him pull them out as often as he chooses, they can all go back quickly at the end of the day and will spare the adult's possessions in other drawers.

Devote one lower cupboard in the kitchen to the type of tin plates, utensils which pile one inside the other, which the child will adore playing with while you work.

If all of this seems troublesome, just try it and see how much happier life will be and how much more contented the child when in each room he has possessions, or playthings, which seem like those of adults but which he can handle without being scolded.

Then the warning, "Not for baby; that is mother's," will be heeded. There are so many objects which are baby's, that the lesson has meaning. Not so when adult quarters are largely forbidden territory.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 9, Eldest of Four Children, Happily Tells Mother That Hired Man Embraced Her, Called Her His Girl; How Instill Caution?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem isn't serious, perhaps, except that I don't know how to handle it. It concerns the eldest of our four children, a daughter, 9 years old—and a young lad, 14, whom we have hired to help with the farm work.

Lester (I'll call him) is well grown, the slow, plodding type, and serious for a boy of his age. And I was quite surprised last evening when Annie told me that he had embraced her and told her that she was his girl. She was obviously pleased and confided in me at the first opportunity.

I told her that she should not allow Lester to embrace her, and she asked "why not?" I didn't know how to answer, so I temporarily sidetracked the subject. Lester shows no outward signs of any change of feeling. He acts, as always, indifferent to her. Annie, however, takes special notice of him. She tags after him more, trying to gain his attention, etc.

I am glad I was taken into her confidence at once, but what course should I follow to keep it? How should I wisely answer her question "why not?" Can you recommend any books that might cover the subject? I realize this is only the beginning of a type of problem I shall face for some years to come. C. P.

Action, Not Talk, Is Best Safeguard

DEAR C. P.: It is fortunate that Annie came running to you with her big news, also fortunate that you realize the situation calls for careful handling—but it is unduly naive to imagine that the problem can be solved by making a good answer to her catch-question.

She is too young to grasp, all at once, the meaning of topics you'd have to cover, to spell out sex dangers and how to avoid them; and solicitous talk about the hug she enjoyed would only rouse morbid fear or morbid curiosity in a child her age. Foresighted supervision supplied by you must be her protection for some years yet.

I have discussed your letter with a psychiatric social worker, herself a mother, long experienced in helpful management of children, and she remarks, "I'd get between Lester and Annie in about two seconds; and for the good of both I'd send him away—and if possible help him get work on a farm where there are only boys in the family."

Send Hero Away to Block Chase

THIS CONSULTANT feels, as I do, that Lester's furtive embrace of Annie isn't indicative of wholesome affection, inasmuch as he habitually ignores her in the family's presence. Rather it seems symptomatic of poorly integrated growth. He has a man's physique, also growing sex hunger, no doubt; but at the same time he has the slow-witted mind of a child, therefore isn't a trustworthy guardian of his emotional impulses.

It is our view that Lester is a problem to himself, and that it is your duty to deal wisely with him in terms of his limitations, now that your eyes are open. Thus the sufficient response to Annie's revealing candor is to send her hero away so she can't chase him—and don't go into your reasons with them. Be diplomatic and helpful to the lad, and watchful of Annie until he's gone—but push the move immediately. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Sales Tax Makes Life More Complicated

When the sales tax was "temporarily" wished on us out in Ohio, it brought with it a flood of arguments between buyer and seller. And I suspect that the same sort of thing will happen here in the District.

For example, we also had a a ruling covering "separate checks" on restaurant meals, but it didn't do much good. Waitresses and cashiers become accustomed to doing things in a certain way, and they don't change their habits overnight.

Locally, if the total amount of the check, divided by the number of patrons served, equals $1.25 or less, the meals are supposed to be tax exempt. But I'll wager that many a cashier will tack on the tax anyhow—and many a customer will pay it without question.

We'll also have some fun watching the penny-pinchers try to escape the tax on small purchases. For example, one 10-cent cigar is exempt, but two of them constitute a 20-cent purchase, which is taxable.

The angle-shooters are torn between a desire to avoid the tax and the lure of discounts for bigger purchases.

They soon figure out that it's better to get three for a quarter and pay the tax, than it is to buy 'em at 10 cents straight, tax exempt.

Of course, those who don't buy cigars at all are money ahead on both counts.

MISCELLANY

Every time I begin to worry about Movie Critic Dick Coe's tastes being too highbrow, he redeems himself—currently with his endorsement of two W. C. Fields pictures at the Little . . . John Steele tells me that the Westmoreland Congregational Church is giving a "Maid's Night Out" supper, plus movies and a community sing (6:30 tonight, $1.50, Westmoreland Circle nw.) and that reservations may be had by calling Oliver 4787 . . . "Maid's Night Out" my eye—let's get mama out of that hot kitchen for a change . . . And by the way: The Ladies Auxiliary of the Free Sons of Israel is going boating Saturday night on the Wilson Line, with the proceeds going to the crippled and spastic children at Gallinger Hospital (for toys, games, toothbrushes, candy, etc) . . . If you'd like to help the kids and at the same time escape the heat, call Rhoda Burch on Sligo 5571, or Helen Lerner on Randolph 6277, for tickets . . . And Mary Ireland, dance chairman of the Wayfarers Young Peoples Group of the All Souls Unitarian Church wants you to "learn five variations of the Cuban rumba, tango and samba by moonlight on the cool terrace above the courtyard of Pierce Hall, 16th and Harvard sts. nw." any Wednesday night in August. Instruction period begins at 8:30, social dancing at 9:30 . . . Lucinda L. Conley says we've got to be sure to print the pictures of our two Post "heavyweight champions" after they finish with Ida Jean Kain's diet . . . Mrs. Luella M. Moyer of 4211 8th st. nw. wonders whether a recent Post story was intended to prove that bees are sturdy little insects. We reported that an apiarist lay helpless for 45 minutes "while bees stung him over his entire body and survived" . . . Dick Mattingly says that if you have 72 cents you're invited to attend "My Sister Eileen" tomorrow night at 8:30, at the Wilson Teachers College Auditorium . . . Ernie Simon, former WINX disc jockey, is knocking 'em dead in Chicago via stage, radio and television . . . Senator John Foster Dulles, brand-new member of the Senate District Committee, has come out in favor of eliminating the starlings. I'll lay odds that the starlings outlast the Senator on the Washington scene.

SUGGESTION BOX

Henrietta M. Hickerson of 3102 24th st. ne. thinks it would be nice if executives and their underlings were to trade offices for a while, so that the bosses would know how it feels to work in nonairconditioned quarters.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Before a bus driver starts his run on a hot day, he ought to open all the windows. Too many times frail ladies park beside these unopened windows, and either cannot open them or don't want to, because the breeze would muss their hair-do.

Herb Harris,
1121 N. Kensington st.,
Arlington, Va.

Dear Herb:

If it's a choice between sweltering and listening to a female whose hair-do has been mussed, I'd just as soon swelter. Against the heat, a man has certain defenses.

Bill.

Potent Political Alliance Shaken

By Drew Pearson

One partial by-product of Cardinal Spellman's attack on Mrs. Roosevelt is a new political alignment which may reshape the politics of the entire Nation. It may spell the difference between the election of a Democratic and Republican President in 1952, and a Republican and Democratic Congress in 1950.

SPELLMAN

To understand what is happening, you have to remember that for the past two decades there has been a close political alliance between Catholics and Jews in New York City, and in many other big industrial cities, such as Boston and Philadelphia.

The combination of Catholics and Jews in New York consistently carried the State for Roosevelt, and for Al Smith before him. It was an almost unbeatable combination.

However, Democratic political leaders are now privately and mournfully predicting that the alliance is almost certain to fall apart. They base this upon two factors:

One is the much-publicized attack on Mrs. Roosevelt by Cardinal Spellman, which has focused Nation-wide attention on religious issues.

Two is the much-less-publicized opposition of Cardinal Spellman to former Governor Herbert Lehman who had hoped to be the first Jew in history to be elected to the United States Senate.

Cardinal vs. Lehman

Lehman, who served as Governor of New York longer than any other man, was considered a sure winner for the Senate seat of Bob Wagner. As Governor, he had received the support of all religious groups. However, the Cardinal and Lehman got into an argument last year over the banning of the Nation, a magazine, from New York public school libraries because the Nation had published a series of articles by Paul Blanshard critical of the Catholic Church.

Lehman took the position that, since the New York public schools are attended by Protestants and Jews, as well as Catholics, their reading material should not be fixed by Catholics alone. Lehman felt that the Catholic Church had every right to set the reading material in its own parochial schools, but not in public schools which are supported by the taxpayers.

Cardinal Spellman, however, vigorously disagreed with Lehman, and wrote him a sharp personal letter.

Now that Lehman is available for the Senate, he has received word from Catholic leaders that, because of his stand on the censorship of the Nation, he would have definite church opposition. Naturally this would make it difficult, if not impossible, for him to win. This has been the chief reason why the former Governor has delayed in announcing his candidacy.

FDR, jr., saw Cardinal

In the light of Cardinal Spellman's criticism of Mrs. Roosevelt, it is interesting to recall a conference which took place between the Cardinal and her son before young Franklin ran for Congress last spring.

FDR, jr., called on the Cardinal to inform him that his wife was planning to sue for divorce. Young Franklin is an Episcopalian, but he called on the Catholic prelate because of the fact that about 25 per cent of the voters in the Twentieth New York District are Catholic and he wanted their support.

Roosevelt made it clear that he did not want the divorce, but that his wife, the former Ethel duPont, insisted on it. Cardinal Spellman deplored the divorce, but advised that if Mrs. Roosevelt, jr., demanded it, then FDR, jr., should refrain from marrying again.

McCarran's Immigrants

Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, whose name means "keep out" to Europe's homeless refugees, actually begged the Senate the other day to admit 250 more people into this country. It turned out, however, that he only wanted sheepherders to tend flocks in the West. McCarran wanted to import them, not from displaced-persons camps, but from the Pyrenees Mountains, along the Franco-Spanish border.

This was a curious request coming from McCarran who, alone, stands in the way of 400,000 displaced persons (including 5000 sheepherders) who wish to start a new life in the United States. As chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, he has been able to block a bill rectifying the Eightieth Congress' Displaced Persons Act, which discriminated against Jews and Catholics.

The gentleman from Nevada almost got down on his knees.

"There is no more important bill on the calendar than this one," begged McCarran, fervently describing the plight of the West's neglected sheep, and the need for sheepherders from abroad.

But Senator Robert Hendrickson, New Jersey Republican, shot back:

"As I understand there are in some of the displaced-persons camps over 5000 sheepherders."
